Turkey drop stirs protest

United Press International
YELLVILLE, Ark. — Despite protests by the Humane Society, live turkeys will be dropped from a plane to hundreds of spectators Friday during the annual Yellville Turkey Trot.

A low-flying plane will release 16 turkeys in drops Friday and Saturday. Spectators gathered on the courthouse square will be allowed to keep the turkeys they catch.

The traditional turkey drop was criticized last year by William R. Meade III of Corpus Christi, regional director of the Humane Society. He said the event violated Arkansas laws prohibiting free running of livestock and mistreatment of animals.

However, Bob Moore, president of the Yellville Chamber of Commerce, said this year's turkeys "are able to glide to the ground."

Bonds approved for corporation

O.I. Corporation (formerly Oceanography International Corp.) will begin construction on a new 28,000-foot facility in College Station with revenue bonds approved by the Brazos County Commissioners.

Wednesday morning in a Commissioners Court meeting, the commissioners approved the corporation's request for approval of a resolution by the Brazos County Industrial Development Corporation to issue revenue bonds.

O.I. Corp. President John R. Hughey said the facility will not only give the corporation an "opportunity to make some money," but is also important for the county as a whole.

"It's incumbent for Bryan and College Station to build an industrial tax base on which they can collect taxes," he said.

The corporation, which develops high technology products for the oil production, expects to employ 80 to 85 people in the next year and to expand even further in the future, Hughey said.

Hughey said, "The cooperation by the city, the banks and the commissioners has made it possible for us to quadruple the facilities we have today."

In other business the commissioners passed a resolution authorizing the bonds totalling $1 million for improvements and expansion of the Brazos County Courthouse and its annex. The bonds were divided into two parts with $880,000 to be used for the courthouse annex and $120,000 for preliminary work on the courthouse itself.

The commissioners also set a public hearing concerning the 1980 budget and the revenue sharing budget for Brazos County for Oct. 21.

Taxes burn bargains

United Press International
AUSTIN — Comptroller Bob Bullock warned Texans Wednesday they are responsible for payment of taxes on cigarettes purchased out of state.

Bullock said advertisements have appeared in Texas recently offering mail order cigarettes, and the tobacco products do not carry the state's tax stamp.

"Cigarette bargains can go up in smoke quicker than a cheap cigar in a hurricane if the tobacco taxes aren't paid," he said.

Bullock said two firms have advertised mail order cigarettes at $4.75 a carton, but that price does not include the $1.85-a-carton state tax.
