DID YOU SAY YOU NEED SOME HELP WITH YOUR KICKER TEAM?

Bum upset with refs, again

United Press International
HOUSTON — Houston Oilers coach Bum Phillips Monday denounced the referee's handling of an inadvertent whistle incident, which cost his team a touchdown against the Denver Broncos.

Phillips said, however, he would take no action against back judge J.W. Sanders or referee Gene Barth because their decision to strip Carl Roaches' of a 74-yard punt return was the correct action even though "they just really messed up."

NFL rules state a referee's whistle, whether intentional or not, stops play.

Sanders apologized to Phillips after the Sunday incident, but neither a kind word nor the Oilers' eventual 20-16 win dulled the edge of Phillips' ire, which he said was caused by matters following the play.

"I really wasn't mad at the call so much as the way they went about it," he said. "If you blow the whistle and kill the ball, you are supposed to continue to blow the whistle to stop the play. He didn't. Hell, he ran downfield after the play."

Referees huddled as Phillips congratulated punt returner Roaches and the Oilers' extra-point team lined up to kick.

"Nobody came over and told us anything after their huddle. The referee should have walked over to us and said, 'Now coach, I know it's hard to believe but we gotta call it back because the ref inadvertently blew his whistle.' But they started back down the field with the ball and nobody is telling anybody anything," he said.

Phillips said he was standing less than 15 feet from Sanders and did not hear a whistle. He added that the game film showed Sanders getting bumped from behind and apparently exhaling with the whistle in his mouth.

"Number one, you don't put the whistle in your mouth until you're ready to blow it," Phillips said.

The Oilers were given the ball at their own 25-yard line although Phillips said the film shows Roaches advancing to the 35 when Sanders was bumped.

"They gave us the ball where a beanbag was thrown to mark the start of the return. Now doesn't that make sense," Phillips said.

The inadvertent whistle was the second in the past two weeks at Oilers games. Against the Cincinnati Bengals, defensive tackle Jesse Baker was running in the open field after picking up a fumble when stopped by a whistle.

The latest referee's mistake, Phillips said, proved again an old saying of his: referees never beat you.

"They didn't yesterday, but they tried. That game was a pretty good example and what I've said. They cost you a touchdown, but you come back to play the type of ball you're capable of playing. And you don't let it get you down. And hell, you go ahead and win anyhow," he said.

The Oilers drove 75 yards after the incident to score and go ahead 20-9.

Tailback Earl Campbell carried the load on that drive and a later one which the Oilers used to maintain the football in the final minutes.

"It was probably the best football game we've played this year. It was a game we had to win. It was against a team that had to win," Phillips said.

Women golfers improved; Coach eyes more expansion

By CAROLYN BARNES

Last year, the Texas A&M University women's golf team had a slow start and never really recovered due to several injuries on the team. This year, the Aggies are finally healthy and the results have been healthier.

In its last tournament appearance, the team finished fourth out of a field of 22 teams at the Georgia Invitational in the 1979-80 season Oct. 14-16 in Athens, Ga.

The Aggies have placed higher than last year in each of the first three tournaments entered.

A&M Head Coach Kitty Holley said the team has good depth this year and has shown a lot of improvement over last year.

The Aggies placed fifth in a 24-team field at the Susie Maxwell All-College Classic in Oklahoma to start the 1980 fall season off, and at its second tournament in Albuquerque, N.M., the team had a very good finish to place sixth out of a very strong 16-team field.

The nine players making up the Aggies this season are "basically a pretty young team" and are "very close to being a winning team," said Holley.

There are seven girls on full scholarship and two non-scholarship players. The scholarship players include Kim Bauer, a senior who was named to the All-State team and is a very strong candidate for All-America this year, junior Monica Welsh, three sophomores, Jackie Tertram, Shirley Furlong and Sheila McField; and freshmen Susan Yantis and Kerry Bower, who hails from Logansport, Ind.

Holley said the two non-scholarship players, Cynthia Watson, a freshman from St. Louis and Penny Hughes, a transfer from Temple Junior College, are both very good players.

Playing as a team has been an important asset this year. Co-captains Bauer and Welsh have contributed to the team spirit with their terrific leadership, said Holley.

Holley, who has been the golf team coach since the program began six years ago, said the program has expanded every year and that there are now eight full scholarships in women's golf.

Recruiting for the team has already begun with March being the earliest that scholarship agreements and letters of intent can be sent out.

"We're expanding, and we'll keep expanding," said Holley.

The women's golf season runs from September to June. This year, the Aggies face one of the toughest schedules they have played in a long while. Texas A&M plays only 54-hole competitive tournaments, which apply toward qualifying for the AIAW National Championship.

Only five team members go to each tournament, and the four lowest scores from those members are used. Team members with the lowest scores from three days of 18-hole qualifying rounds travel to the next tournament. Three members of the team have been exempted from the qualifying rounds by finishing in the top 20 at the Georgia Invitational — Bauer, who tied for 11th; Welsh, 5th; and Furlong, who tied for 20th out of a field of 110 players.

The next tournament will be the Lady Gator Invitational at the University of Florida in Gainesville, Fla., Nov. 14-16. The last tournament of the fall semester will be a partnership duo-match at the Bluebonnet Bowl Golf Invitational co-sponsored by Rice University and Tennessee at the Columbia Lakes Country Club in West Columbia.

Next semester the team has tournaments scheduled in Texas and one in South Carolina. The Texas A&M "Future Pro" Tournament will be held at the Briarcrest Country Club in Bryan March 1-3.
