ERA's opponents a diverse group, psychologists report

United Press International
DALLAS — Opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment might be surprised to learn they have something in common with Communist Party, John Birch Society and Ku Klux Klan, according to a study co-authored by a Dallas psychiatrist.

"Opposition to the ERA: The Role of American Extremists," a paper authored by Drs. Paula Johnson of the psychology department at the University of California at Los Angeles, and Ruth McGill of Dallas, contends the anti-ERA movement is composed of an extremely diverse factions.

"The Equal Rights Amendment is being deliberately strangled by American extremists in order to promote their own goals," states the McGill-Johnson paper, which was presented at the 88th annual convention of the American Psychological Association in Montreal.

The study examines what it terms the "deliberate, incendiary manipulation by both the radical right and radical left to exploit non-conscious anxieties and the imminent dangers to the unaware American public."

Organized opposition to the ERA is nothing new.

The women say their research shows that ERA opponents began lining up on the left in the 1920's. Among the proposal's early-day opponents was the Communist Party, a position it reiterated in the official party journal as recently as 1976.

"A major theme of right wing publications is that the ERA is the work of communists and/or that it would transform America into a society similar to that of Russia," the women contend.

However, the McGill-Johnson study contends that close examination of American Communist Party, New Left and Socialist literature as well as FBI files makes it "difficult to comprehend how the ERA is viewed as a communist plot."

Although research shows the communists have remained relatively silent on ERA in recent years, women attribute it to the growing support among the trade unions and the party's effort to recruit workers into its ranks.

Elsewhere on the political left, women say they have found opposition to ERA or a lack of interest in supporting the measure. This includes such organizations as the Weatherman, the Revolutionary Union and the Freedom Socialist Party. The Socialist Workers Party, the only group on record supporting the ERA, the paper says.

"This supposed support is cited in right wing literature to denounce the ERA as a communist plot," the doctors claimed.

Son charged in $4,000 theft

Dad robbed, must pay twice

United Press International
LUBBOCK — A businessman, who has demanded legal action be taken against his teen-age son for thefts of $4,000 in cash and property from his business, now may have to pay for his child's defense attorney.

"There's no way I'm going to pay a thing. I'm the one who got ripped off," said the outraged father, who police would not identify.

Sgt. Arlen Mason said he sympathized with the man but said he may have no choice. Section 51.10, paragraph D, of the Texas Family Code states:

"The court shall order a child's parent or other person responsible for support of the child to employ an attorney to represent the child."

Police reports indicate the 16-year-old is a suspect in the theft of up to $900 cash, a $2,700 gold stick pin and $450 in tools.

The youth was first questioned by police after he allegedly took the cash and the stick pin from his father's office in September.

Following the teen-ager's arrest, Mason said the case was turned over to the county juvenile probation office. He said it was dropped, however, because someone determined it was not illegal to steal a parent.

Lloyd Watts, administrator of the office, disagreed. Cases are generally dropped, he said, if misdemeanor thefts have occurred against a parent. But a case involving a child that size, "Watts said, would be pursued.

Asked Thursday if he planned for his child's attorney, the man said, "I'm still in shock with this, so I refuse to say anything this time."

Dinosaur skull found in N.M.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Fossil experts were preparing an expedition to recover a rare dinosaur skull today in the San Juan Basin of northwestern New Mexico.

The skull, at least 65 million years old, is that of a Ceratopsian member of the Triceratops family.

It is "an incredibly important specimen," Keith Rigby, a Bureau of Land Management paleontologist, said Wednesday.

The Triceratops family was the last group of dinosaurs to develop, he said, and the family is noted for pronounced horn and head shields.

The skull was to be recovered today in the Ah-shi-sle-pah wilderness study area, which could present a problem in transporting the remains to safety. By law, motorized vehicles are banned from wilderness areas.

If the skull weighed 700 pounds or less, officials said it would be hand-carried for a mile to get outside the wilderness area.

Rigby said if it weighed up to 1,500 pounds "we may have to bring a helicopter in," and "if it's more than 1,500, we may have to go bigger to be able to bring a vehicle in."

Rigby said some skulls have weighed up to 2,000 pounds.

"We may be forced, because it is a wilderness study area, to break the skull into pieces and carry the pieces out," Rigby said. "I don't want to do that."

The skull was found during BLM surveys of the area where 2 billion tons of coal is expected to be mined in the next decade. Rigby said the skull had to be removed quickly because it was exposed to the elements.

"The brain case of the skull is very nearly completely exposed, and we're concerned that within perhaps a winter or two, weather effects would simply destroy it," Rigby said.
