Who shot J.R.? Now we'll know

United Press International
HOLLYWOOD - More than a third of the nation will tune in "Dallas" Friday night, surpassing by far those who watched the presidential election returns, to discover who shot dastardly J.R. Ewing, the man America loves to hate.

CBS-TV estimates the prime-time soap opera will have a 75 percent share of the audience, or more than 70 million viewers. The Carter-Reagan election returns, on the other hand, didn't even show up on the top 60 of the Nielsen ratings the first week of November.

The saga of J.R.'s brush with death began last March when an unseen assailant pumped a couple of slugs into the millionaire oilman, thereby touching off an international whodunit.

The mystery was heightened when English bookmakers and Las Vegas gamblers began taking bets on the cast of suspects in the hour-long series, which stars Larry Hagman in the role of the Texas philanderer and oil tycoon.

"Dallas," which is seen in dozens of foreign countries as well as the United States and Canada, received additional hype when last summer's actors' strike postponed the solution to who shot J.R. by two months.

Earlier this week, Queen Mother Elizabeth of England voiced her regret at not knowing the name of the culprit. She, like everyone else, must wait until Friday's denouement. Air France even announced Wednesday a dispatcher will monitor the show in New York radio all trans-Atlantic flights who shot the vile J.R.

Sponsors are paying a mere $500,000 per minute to broadcast a moment of truth to viewers.

Las Vegas bookmakers had down the betting underdog Nevada Gaming Control Board which ruled it was "not a sports event." But the last line was:

— Even money: Sue Ellen, J.R.'s dipsomaniacal, nymphomaniac wife, and Dusty Farber, Ellen's one-time lover believed led in an airplane crash.

— Three-to-one: Vaughan, an arch rival broken by J.R.'s oil scheme, and Kristin Shepard, J.R.'s sister-in-law and sometime tress.

— Four-to-one: Alan Roper, lawyer blacklisted by J.R., and sister-in-law, his mother, Ellie, and father Jack Ewing.

People Magazine's poll of more than 35,000 readers proved to be the favored suspect: 14 percent of those polled, John Krusten, with 14 percent.

Almost every member of the had the motivation and the dispatch the evil J.R., but the actors can be sure who the Story editor Art Lewis said different endings have been to keep even the cast and crew dark. He added, however, "I know who I have known in February who the killer is."
