Atheists to watch evangelists

United Press International
TULSA, Okla. — Oral Roberts will not be the only evangelist targeted for close scrutiny by an Austin-based atheist organization founded by Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

Members of American Atheists said Wednesday they also are interested in several "smaller" evangelists in Arkansas and Tennessee.

American Atheists recently announced they intend to form a chapter in Oklahoma City.

When group members announced plans for the Oklahoma City chapter, they singled out Roberts as a target, but since then they say they have added others.

"Oral Roberts is not the only one," Ms. O'Hair's son, Jon Murray, said. "We were also looking at Billy James Hargis for a while, but he has not been so visible in recent years."

"There are a number of smaller ones (evangelists), particularly in Arkansas and Tennessee, and that's one of the major reasons I'll go from Oklahoma City to Little Rock, Ark., to see about forming a chapter there."

Murray said Oklahoma City was chosen for the group's first recruiting effort in the state because "we have several names on our mailing list from that community."

Murray said his group singled out the Tulsa evangelist because of Roberts' reported vision of a 900-foot Jesus on Oral Roberts University's Tulsa campus. Roberts told supporters about the vision in fund-raising letters and Murray said those clips may constitute mail fraud.

"He (Roberts) has a right to raise money for his City of Faith, or whatever it is, on the basis of things that are true, but not on the basis of some kind of fantasy," Murray said.

The proposed Oklahoma City chapter — as well as all American Atheists chapters — will also be closely watching elected public officials who were actively supported by the Moral Majority, Murray said.

New administration rebuked by Castro in militia speech

United Press International
MIAMI — Cuban President Fidel Castro Tuesday described the newly inaugurated administration of President Ronald Reagan as "a menace to peace."

The description came in a rambling 90-minute speech to mark the formation of a new militia unit near the eastern end of the island nation.

"The creation of these militia troops is the answer to the menace (of the Reagan administration). If Cuba is attacked, we will defend ourselves, and if we do not have enough weapons, we know how to get them from the enemy," Castro said.

Castro's speech at the town of Gisa was broadcast by Radio Havana and monitored in Miami.

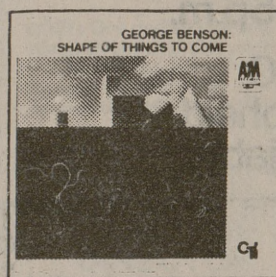

Noting that "In the United States, the new government began its duties," Castro said. "This government represents a menace to the peace and to the most vital interests of the great majority of the people of that nation."

Castro said the coming to power of the Reagan administration has complicated the international situation.
