Lockers provide problem solution

Most any Texas A&M faculty or staff member or student can relate to the hassle of having to carry dirty, sweaty clothes back and forth to work after a daily workout.

Stopping by the Intramural-Recreational Sports Office in Room 159 East Kyle to rent a recreation locker for the semester or longer may solve that problem.

Lockers for men and women are now available in G. Rollie White Coliseum and the new East Kyle facilities. Students, faculty, staff and spouses may rent one of these lockers for $3 per semester (faculty, staff and spouses may also purchase a $1 recreation I.D. card). Individuals may also wish to purchase clothing services for an additional $7 per semester.

In addition to an increased number of lockers, another significant change this semester affects dependents of faculty, staff and students. Dependent children 15 and older are now eligible to use the recreation facilities by presenting a current recreation I.D. card when entering the facility.

Dependent children 12-14 years old are eligible to use the tennis courts by presenting the current recreation I.D. when entering the courts. Dependent children 14 and under are eligible to use the indoor facilities only if they enter and participate with their parent(s). Dependent children under 12 are eligible to use all facilities only if they enter and participate with their parent(s).

Students, faculty and staff will be asked to sign a release acknowledging their awareness of the risks involved in their child's participation in activities in A&M recreation facilities, and to verify their child's age.

Recreation I.D. for dependents as well as faculty, staff and spouses can be purchased for $1 in the Intramural-Recreational Sports Office. Anyone having questions regarding activities, facilities or services offered by the Intramural Office is encouraged to drop by that office or call 845-7826 during office hours.

Confident Longhorns take on Lady Ags at 5:15

By JON HEIDTKE

Battalion Staff
The University of Texas Lady Longhorns bring their Top 10 national ranking into G. Rollie White Coliseum this evening when they take on a struggling Texas A&M team beginning at 5:15 in the first game of a basketball doubleheader.

Coach Cheri Rapp's team has fallen on hard times this year and Saturday night dropped a 90-66 decision to the University of Houston in Hofheinz Pavilion.

"The game might have had a different outcome if we had eliminated either our turnovers or our poor shooting," said Assistant Coach Cindy Gough. On the night, the Aggie Ladies could only manage a miserable 36 percent from the field, and to make matters worse, they turned the ball over 38 times.

The Cougars jumped out to a quick 18-4 lead, but the Aggies battled back and trailed by only 11 at the half, 44-33. But that was the closest the Aggies got as Houston shot 55 percent for the game and pulled away for the 24-point victory.

"Once we got going, we would hit a cold spell and they (Houston) would capitalize on it," Gough said summing up the game. "But when they hit a cold spell we wouldn't take advantage of it."

Kelley Sullivan led the Aggies with 18 points, while Cathy Fuller chipped in 17 and led the team in rebounds with nine. Gough praised Fuller by saying she has been one of the players the coaching staff has been able to depend during the last four games.

One of the main problems plaguing the 4-14 Aggies all year is their inability to get three good individual performances during the game.

"We don't know who is gonna out us each game," Gough said. "Usually get two good performances but it seems we can never get that in the same game."

If the Aggies are to beat Texas they will need good performances from all five starters. The Longhorns are led by Nell Fortner and Jim Swaim, who give Texas a strong side game.

Gough said the Longhorns are a lot of size, but don't have the guards they had last year and probably come into the game confident, which may work to the Aggies favor.

After the Texas game, Rapp got the team ready for the South Conference Invitational Tournament in Houston on Wednesday. The tournament will be the first time a SWC tournament has been held for the women. Texas A&M will open up against TCU.

Lynn goes to Angels

United Press International
BOSTON — If the fans of the Boston Red Sox and California Angels get a little confused when the baseball season opens in the spring, it will be perfectly understandable.

They are going to see an awful lot of familiar faces in unfamiliar uniforms.

The Red Sox, desperate to minimize potential damage from a sticky negotiating snarl, traded All-Star center-fielder Fred Lynn and pitcher Steve Renko to the Angels Friday for pitchers Frank Tanana and Jim Dorsey and outfielder Joe Rudi.

The five-player swap came just one month after the two American League teams swapped five other players. Boston sent shortstop Rick Burleson and third baseman Butch Hobson to the Angels in exchange for third baseman Carney Lansford, relief pitcher Mark Clear and outfielder Rick Miller.

Lynn has agreed to a four-year contract with the Angels.

The trade was an 11th-hour move by Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan, who was faced with the possibility of getting nothing for Lynn, who along with catcher Carlton Fisk had claimed free-agent status.

Sullivan made the trade announcement in New York simultaneously with Angels' Vice President Buzzy Bavasi in Anaheim, Calif.

Later Ralph Houk, who recently named to replace former Sox Manager Don Zimmer, said he was enthusiastic about the move, especially in the light of the surprising negotiations with Lynn.

"Considering the possibility we could have ended up with nothing for Lynn, we made a good deal," said Houk.

"We really helped our state pitching with Tanana. Our reputation on Dorsey are good and while I say exactly how we'll use Rudi, quality player and gives us the depth we have to have to compete with the New Yorks and Milwaukee and Baltimore," said Houk.

Lynn and Fisk filed for free-agent status when Sullivan didn't make contracts to them by the last mandated Dec. 20 deadline.

Both players were entering option years and the Players Association felt contracts had to be tendered to them both. The Red Sox had said all along there was no intention to extend contracts because they were covered by the option year.

In Anaheim, Calif., Bavasi said he was delighted by the deal.

"We've had our eye on Fred Lynn for a long time. The impetus behind the whole thing... was Lynn Fisk applying for their free-agent status from the Red Sox," he said.

Bavasi also said "Renko showed in very well as a spot starter. His record was comparable to one on our club last season."

Portland takes Spurs by 18

United Press International
PORTLAND, Ore. — Jim Paxson scored 21 points in leading the Portland Trail Blazer guard-oriented offense to a 118-100 victory over San Antonio Sunday night.

The win evened Portland's record at 26-26. The loss was San Antonio's third in a row and sixth straight back on the road. The Spurs lead the Midwest Division, 20-19.
