Evans Library completes changes made in author catalog system

By FRANK L. CHRISTLIEB
Battalion Reporter
Evans Library users no longer must know the formal names of authors to be able to find books written by them. Books formerly listed under "Clemens, Samuel Langhorne" now fall under "Twain, Mark" also.

Leila Payne, head of the processing division at Evans Library, said changes have been made in the author-title portion of the catalog. Each heading card now lists the name by which an author is more commonly known, she said. Payne said rather than removing and retyping the several hundred cards that have been changed, the library is using a system of guide cards. The new heading on each card has been printed in pencil above the previous heading, which has been crossed out, saving the library the time and trouble of retyping each card. A pink card marks the end of the set of cards behind each guide card in the catalog. There are also cross-references that refer catalog users from the old listings to the new ones, making them easier to find. Payne said planning for the catalog changes began about two years ago after publication of the second edition of the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules.

The rules, used by the Library of Congress and many academic libraries in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Australia, is a listing of standard rules for library cataloging which also outlines changes in previous rules as well.

The libraries in these countries are attempting to standardize library cataloging by making the changes outlined in the rules. Payne said no complaints or problems have resulted from the changes. She said she does not foresee any major problems resulting from the catalog changes.

A list of headings used in the card catalog, as well as those changed by the new rules, is available at the reference desk in the library. Payne added that members of the library staff will help anyone who has trouble understanding the changes.

The Sterling C. Evans Library recently made changes in the author-title portion of the card catalog system to make it easier to find what they are looking for. Authors previously listed under their formal names are now listed under their pen names.

RHA to look at huts, restructuring

Tonight's Residence Hall Association meeting in 204 Harrington at 7:00 will concern three issues facing the association, RHA President Sherrie Balcar said. The first is the possible restructuring of the organization, including the rewriting of its constitution.

The second concerns the use of the Quonset Huts. Dena Todd, former Quonset Huts coordinator, will present a program on the renovation of the huts. Balcar said the possibility regarding the use of the Quonset Huts may also be revised.

The third major topic facing the RHA is the dispute over the campus housing of fifth-year seniors and graduate students. Balcar said there would be a report given at the meeting by a committee which is dealing with the issue.
