Popcorn replaces peanut as snack after drought

United Press International
DES MOINES, Iowa — Iowa's popcorn industry sees gold in the decline of the goober.
The hot, roasted peanut, long the staple of taverns and ballparks, has fallen victim to last summer's drought in the Deep South. Now, with peanut prices soaring, popcorn growers and merchants anticipate a banner year for their explosive kernels.
Shortages have pushed the wholesale price of peanuts up from 70 cents a pound last year to $1.82 a pound last week. Big can companies reportedly stockpiled peanuts to ensure their continued business, leaving desperate snacksters out in the cold.
But sales of popcorn have been brisk.

Don Nelson of Danville, king of Iowa's popcorn producers, was encouraged enough to enter the market on his own. Two weeks ago, he marketed his first bag of Colonel Don's Popcorn.
"The snack food has taken the place of peanuts," he said. "Popcorn is nutritious and those with financially binding problems make it into a meal. Sometimes it's a Sunday evening meal."
Nelson said most of his popcorn is shipped to theaters and ballparks in Boston and New York. Easterners, he noted, are voracious snackers.

"Easterners are known for buying bagged popcorn like we buy potato chips," Nelson said. "Easterners are bigger on snack foods than we are in the Midwest, believe it or not. Popcorn is really going well out there."
A spokesman for the Jolly Time Popcorn Co. in Sioux City said the shortage of peanuts and subsequent price increases have positively affected their sales of popcorn also.
"It is not only anticipated, it has definitely showed up," Reed

Smith said. "Sales are up about 10 percent for the first three (sales) months of October, November and December."
Smith attributed the increased sales to the peanut shortage, but said the nation's abandonment of expensive candy bars also played a role.
Despite the boom in popcorn sales, Smith said the industry is not picking up business as fast as would like to.
"There's a semi-shortage in popcorn," he said. "We don't have the supply. We were hurt with the drought, but not as severely as the peanut people. Yields were down 15 percent and total production was down a few million pounds."
Fred Schulze, whose Des Moines Catering Co. supplies snacks to Veteran's Auditorium in Des Moines, says popcorn may be his company's salvation with peanuts available for the upcoming state wrestling and basketball tournaments.
"Surprisingly we have played it," he said. "Popcorn stayed stable. We can get any amount. I got my orders in for the tournaments."

Bandit strips victims to escape with loot

United Press International
DALLAS — Police in the Dallas-Fort Worth area are comparing notes on a man who robs women's clothing stores and forces his victims to strip to their underwear.
The robber, known to police as the "pants bandit," has committed about two dozen holdups in Dallas, Fort Worth and their suburbs. Police representatives from the cities met Tuesday with Texas Rangers and Dallas County deputies to analyze the bandit.
The man uses a chrome-plated pistol to rob clothing stores where only women work. He forces employees and customers to the back of the store.
"He makes them strip down to their panties and bra and then carries their clothes to the front door where he drops them," said Dallas Police Sgt. Harold Rice. "Since the people don't have any clothes on, not many of them have gone out to see how he gets away."
The robberies began in Houston, where about 25 were reported, and the bandit moved to the Dallas area in November. Similar robberies now have been reported in Waco. A 16-year-old Houston girl and a 14-year-old in Waco were raped in the holdups.
Rice said the robber will hit as many as three stores in a five-hour period and usually gets about $300.
The bandit is described as being between 19 and 21 years old and frequently wears a false beard.

Growers welcome state fruit embargo

United Press International
HARLINGEN — Only three days remain for California farmers to ship their fruits and vegetables to Texas, and Texas farmers said Wednesday they welcome the embargo.
"We have to quarantine our citrus that goes to California," said citrus grower J.A. Kutzenberger of Harlingen. "If the shoe fits us, it ought to fit them."
Texas Agriculture Secretary Reagan Brown set the March 1 import ban on California produce because of a Mediterranean fruit fly infestation in two California counties. The ban effects all host plants of the fruit fly.
Kutzenberger, who said most of the Texas citrus growers to whom he has talked agree on the California produce ban, said the western state has forced fumigation of Texas produce because of the Mexican fruit fly.
"The (Mediterranean fruit fly) could be brought in on their citrus produce," he said. "All actions should be taken to keep it out. We have too much at stake."

California, which ships more than $100 million in produce, mostly oranges, to Texas, has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to stop Texas from imposing the quarantine.
But another Harlingen farmer, Brad Crockett, said Brown made "an excellent move" by imposing the quarantine.
"Until California brings their problem under control, their fruit should be quarantined," Crockett said. "It's the same as the quarantine they impose on our fruit because of the Mexican fly."
Sugar Tree Farms manager Leo Close said he does not believe Texas' quarantine is a retaliatory move for California's restrictions on Texas products.
"I don't think our reaction now is just sour grapes," Close said. "We could have a serious problem if the Mediterranean fly gets into this area."
