TCU baseball team looking good

By RITCHIE PRIDDY

Battalion Staff
The TCU Horned Frogs 1981 baseball outlook is very promising, something almost foreign to the school.

Fifth-year coach Willie Maxwell returns six of his top eight hitters from the 1980 season that saw the Frogs finish 19-28-2 for the season, 7-14-2 (sixth place) in Southwest Conference play.

That represents the best TCU conference finish in five years. And they consider that successful. Of the 28 losses TCU suffered last season, 14 of them were one-run games.

Along with those returning, Maxwell has brought in five junior college transfers and a dozen freshmen, and expects to top last year's performance to establish a solid baseball tradition at TCU.

Pitching seems to be the big question mark for the Frogs as they lost their top two starters to graduation. But TCU has several capable pitchers in senior right-hander Greg Meyer (8-8, 5.47 ERA) and juniors Glen Pierce and Chris Leiss. Juco transfer Greg Moore could possibly break into the starting rotation.

The Frogs, however have only one proven lefthander in Mark Heinitz (0-1, 9.45 ERA). Juco transfer David Shelburn will see some action. Freshmen Jeff Long and Mark Strickland are expected to serve as backups.

"The jury is probably still out on just how good our pitching is going to be this season, but I'm confident we'll be good enough to win," Maxwell said.

Steady Eddie Pereira returns as team co-captain and starting catcher. Pereira is a proven defensive player but can hit (.311) as well.

First base is one of the positions still up in the air. Third baseman Carlos Barrett (.308) may get the nod but will have to fight off sophomore griddler Steve Stamp (.308), who saw plenty of action there last season.

Senior co-captain Trey Brooks (.276) has second base tied down, having moved there from shortstop.

"Trey's a natural second baseman and that was his position in high school. He feels more comfortable there," Maxwell said.

Juco transfer Warren Oliver may see some action at second as well, but seems to have the short-stop position anchored.

Last season's starting second baseman, Steve Mariz (.317) has moved over to third base and will probably start there. Carlos Barrett may also figure in at third. Gone are rightfielder Scott Ringnald and centerfielder Don Peterson, who led the team in hitting (.361 and .345 respectively). But the outfield positions seem secure in the hands of centerfielder Luis Rojas (.272) and leftfielder Randy Knust (.338). There will be a four-way battle for rightfielder between newcomers Scott Wagner, Kenny Crafton, Mark Eberhart and Barry Davis.

"We're stronger defensively than we were last year by a long way," Maxwell said, sizing up his

Myers, Haller are put out over SWC tourney losses

United Press International
SAN ANTONIO — Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers and Baylor coach Jim Haller were bothered by their respective losses Thursday at the Southwest Conference Championship tournament.

For Myers it was his players, and for Haller it was his team's schedule.

Myers said it was the way his players shot and ran, or didn't run, in the final moments of their 66-58 loss to Texas.

"I was disappointed in the way we played the last half of the second half," Myers said. "I was proud of the way our guys came back in the first half, but we just couldn't keep it."

Texas center LaSalle Thompson, the games' leading scorer with 21 points and 13 rebounds, agreed with Myers.

He said some of the Texas Tech players were tired in the second half.

"(Clarence) Swannegan got tired and started missing his shots, and he was tired on defense," Thompson said. "When that happened, he started playing behind me instead of in front."

Swannegan, a freshman center who showed muscle under the backboards against a more experienced Thompson, scored six of his eight points in the opening minutes of the second half, expanding the Texas Tech one-point half-time lead to five points.

After Swannegan's scoring explosion, he put up few shots.

But Swannegan wasn't the only Texas Tech player who slowed down. The team attempted 24 shots in the second half compared to 32 in the first period.

For Baylor's Haller, it was the final two weeks of the season in which the Bears had only one game.

He thought it left his players rusty against a hot-handed Texas Christian team which took the Bears' post-season hopes by a 56-47 margin in the quarterfinals.

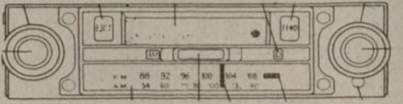

Haller said the Horned Frogs deserved to beat Baylor in the tournament's second round.

"They (the Bears) were less sharp tonight than any other since Christmas," Haller said. "I don't recall a game this year when we had so many shots go in and out. You make your breaks and we just didn't."
