RHA asked to support protest of fee increases

By BERNIE FETTE
Battalion Staff

Vice President for External Affairs David Collins again asked the support of the Residence Halls Association in protesting the proposed increases in tuition fees at the RHA's regular meeting Thursday night.

Collins, who said he has attended several hearings on the issue in Austin, said the 100 percent increase would affect all students, whether they were in-state, out-of-state, or foreign students. But medical students would experience a 800 percent increase from $400 to $3,600 per scholastic semester.

"We need to make an impression on these folks," Collins said, "we really need to get about a thousand letters to go to Austin."

In other action at the meeting, members voted to authorize the installation of glass-enclosed display cases in those halls which desired them. The cases, called "Wallpaper," will display a collection of college related articles which will be changed every weeks.

The display will also contain some sort of statement, RHA Adviser Nolen Mears said. "All they're asking for is our permission to be in the halls and advertise," he said.

The members also voted to provide a $15 fee paid by each hall for the validation of student cards for paid activity fees.

RHA President Sherrie Balcar said that since 80 spaces were open to attend the president's election at Woodlake, Texas, new hall presidents and gates would receive priority. Old presidents would be able to attend if any spaces were left over.

In other action, reports were given on the part of Casino, Parents' Day, the national convention "Almost Anything Goes" which is scheduled to be held April 12 on the main drill field.

'J.R.' may also sue Enquirer

United Press International
DALLAS - The actor who plays cutthroat J.R. Ewing on the television show "Dallas" says he admires Carol Burnett for filing a libel suit against the National Enquirer, but two Texas researchers say they don't think the trial will hurt the tabloids' sales.

Larry Hagman left open the possibility he too may sue the supermarket tabloid, for a story printed at the height of the "Who Shot J.R.?" hysteria. The cover story, about Hagman's childhood, bore the headline, "He was a Real Stinker. Arrogant. Cruel. Twice as Mean and Rotten as J.R."

The article he objected to said, among other things, that as a youth Hagman enjoyed nailing wounded birds to trees.

But Texas A&M University researchers John Cook and Bill Strong say regardless of the verdict in Burnett's libel suit, the publication's sales probably won't suffer.

They say their research indicates that the Enquirer already had a negative credibility rating, at least among college-aged people, before the trial began.

Strong said most people are aware that gossip isn't true, but they love to take part in it anyway. Such is the case with the National Enquirer, he said.

Hagman had a few choice words of his own for the supermarket tabloid.

"They're unscrupulous," he said. "They're liars, and thieves and they should be brought to justice just like any other criminal."

The tabloid later printed a seven-paragraph retraction. Hagman said was not enough.

"I don't think it was a retraction," he said in a day's Dallas Morning News. "I think it was a rather skimpy compared to the amount I wrote about me."

Lubbock limo fight won by Model A's

United Press International
LUBBOCK - A man whose unique limousine service earned the envy of his competition fought city hall and won Thursday.

Ernesto Martinez may now carry passengers in his two flashy Model A Fords between Lubbock International Airport and the city under an exception to a new ordinance covering taxicabs and limousines.

The Lubbock City Council, with the blessings of officials of a competing cab company, modified a requirement that limousines must carry at least four passengers, thereby permitting Martinez to continue operating so long as he uses antique vehicles.

As proposed, the ordinance would have excluded the Fords because they can carry only three passengers - one in the front and two in the rumble seat.

"We can live with it," Martinez's attorney, Pat Abeysa, said of the council's decision.

Martinez got into the business by accident. People kept asking him for rides in his Model A. He recognized an opportunity to get into a line of work he enjoyed.

So, six months ago he added a second Model A, applied to City

Census statistics arrive early, to help Texas redistricting plans

United Press International
AUSTIN - The U.S. Census Bureau has delivered six days earlier than expected population figures that will be used to redraw congressional and legislative boundaries.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and his staff presented a box containing data to the House and Speaker Bill Clayton Wednesday. The data is expected to be delivered next Wednesday.

Hobby said it would take his staff about a week to process the figures and make them ready for the Legislature to begin drafting redistricting legislation.
