Carter plans to visit LBJ Library

United Press International
AUSTIN — Former President Jimmy Carter will visit the Lyndon B. Johnson Library this week to get some ideas for his own presidential library.

Carter and his wife will arrive Wednesday afternoon at the LBJ Ranch near Stonewall as guests of Mrs. Johnson.

An aide to Mrs. Johnson said the Carters also want to "see what the U.S. Park Service has done" with the ranch. On Thursday, the Carters will visit the LBJ Library and the LBJ School of Public Affairs.

Harry Middleton, director of the library, said former presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford also have visited the LBJ Library with an eye toward such libraries of their presidencies.

Changes predicted in Democrats' future

United Press International
COLUMBUS — Former National Democratic Party Chairman John White predicts some changes in Washington in the next few years.
"I don't think the American people wanted as much of a change as the Republicans think they did," White told an Ohio Democratic Party fund raiser Saturday night.
"The more the people those Republicans, the more I am that we'll regain the White House in 1984," he said.
White, a former Texas legislator and agriculture commissioner, said Carter would have been elected if the hostages had been released a week before the election.
