Houston TV stations refuse to turn tapes over to judge

United Press International
LIBERTY — Attorneys for two Houston television stations said Tuesday they would not turn over unedited versions of Thursday's newscast depicting Vickie Daniel turning over her two young sons to sister-in-law Jean Daniel Murph for a visit with their grandparents.

Jim Crowther, representing Bob Nicholas and KPRC-TV, gave Judge Sam Emison Jr. the edited version of the newscast, but objected to giving the court possession of the unedited tape.

Crowther said unedited and unpublished material is privileged and therefore falls under the freedom of press rights in the First Amendment. Emison recessed without making a decision and said he will pick the matter up after the hearing is resolved. The hearing to determine if Daniel or Murph will get custody of the two boys is in its third week.

Nicholas said he would go to jail if necessary to defend the right to withhold the unedited tapes.

Also subpoenaed by the court was a report by M. A. Barrera for KTRK-TV.

Murph's attorney, Zeke Zbrank, said he does not feel the First Amendment protects the newscasts because they were "biased, one-sided facts."

He said Murph did not know the reporters would be at the house filming the incident when she picked up Franklin Baldwin, 3, and Marion Price IV, 1.

In testimony late Monday, a physician contradicted Daniel's testimony that she and her husband, former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr., had a violent, physical fight before she shot him.

Dr. J.E. Bunce, testifying in the child custody suit filed by Price Daniel's family, said he examined Daniel after the Jan. 19 fatal shooting of her husband.

"When I first saw her she was restrained on a stretcher, had been sedated and was crying," he said. Bunce said he found no indications she had been choked.

"In examining the neck there was no external injury or muscle tenderness," he said under questioning by Zbrank.

Daniel had testified her husband choked her and slapped her repeatedly the night of the slaying, and that she shot him in self-defense.

Bunce said Daniel had a bruise on her forehead and "tenderness" on her left arm but said the injuries likely came during her struggle with ambulance attendants who restrained her and took her, hysterical, to the hospital.

However, under cross-examination by Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, one of Daniel's attorneys, Bunce admitted the head bruise was consistent with a kick.

Bunce also contradicted Daniel's testimony that her husband abused her often before the night of the shooting. Bunce said in the 19 visits she made to his office since 1976 he never saw bruises on her.

Daniel was hospitalized four days after the shooting and Bunce said she was too upset to talk until the second day of her stay. On the fourth day, he said, she was "not agitated and able to control her emotions."

Clements not increasing own security

United Press International
FORT WORTH — Texas Gov. Bill Clements said Tuesday he had not increased his own security in the aftermath of the assassination attempt on President Reagan.

Clements, addressing the Southwest Cattle Raisers' Association convention, said the risk to personal safety was something accepted in public life.

"Anyone in public life, be it the mayor of Fort Worth, city councilmen or the governor, has to expect there is a certain risk there. It's just part of it," he said.

Clements said the news media had unfairly dwelled on the Texas background of the accused gunman, John W. Hinckley Jr.
