Redford, Spacek, De Niro take top Academy Awards

United Press International
HOLLYWOOD — A convalescing Ronald Reagan opened the 53rd annual Academy Awards to five rounds of applause for his taped address, but top honors went to "Ordinary People" as best picture of 1980 and Henry Fonda who received the first Oscar of his 46-year career.

Tuesday night's program, watched by an estimated 300 million television viewers in 66 countries, kept East Coast viewers who were determined to see the finish up until 1:10 a.m. today.

In a bizarre occurrence, a tuxedoed impostor stepped out of the audience, accepted the Oscar for the Hungarian winner of the best animated short film, and fled. He was being sought for theft.

"Ordinary People," the story of a middle-class couple and their suicidal teen-ager, was the top award winner, bringing in four of the $500 gold statuettes. Actress Lillian Gish, 84, came out of retirement to present the best picture trophy.

It also won awards for best director, Robert Redford; best supporting actor, Timothy Hutton, son of the late actor Jim Hutton; and best screenplay based on material from another medium for Alvin Sargent.

"Ordinary People" was Redford's first directing effort and the 20-year-old Hutton's first movie role.

Robert De Niro won best actor for his devastating performance as boxer Jake Lamotta in "Raging Bull." De Niro previously had been nominated for best actor for his roles in "Taxi Driver" in 1976 and in "The Deer Hunter" in 1978. He won best supporting actor in 1974 for his part in "The Godfather Part II."

Sissy Spacek won best actress for her portrayal of singer Loretta Lynn in "Coal Miner's Daughter." Spacek had been nominated for the same award in 1976 for "Carrie," but lost to Faye Dunaway's "Network."

Mary Steenburgen was chosen best supporting actress for her role as the feisty wife in "Melvin and Howard."

But the evening also belonged to former actor Reagan, who opened the show officially with videotaped remarks, and received five rounds of applause from the star-studded audience of almost 3,000.

Although the gala was delayed 24 hours by the shooting of Reagan in Washington Monday, the mood of the evening was light and the recuperating president was even the target of many of emcee Johnny Carson's good natured one-liners.

Carson, in white tie and tails, told the audience at the Los Angeles Music Center, "It was the president's express wishes that we use that introduction. He asked for a television set in his room so he could view that introductory tonight."

"I salute the academy for the influence its work has had on the world's most enduring art form. Film is forever," Reagan said, setting the theme of the program, "Film Forever" in his brief remarks.

A highlight of the night was presentation of a special Oscar to Fonda, honoring a half century of "brilliant accomplishments and enduring contribution to the art of motion pictures."

Redford, who usually shuns the awards ceremonies, presented the award to Fonda, who walked to the stage as the orchestra played "Red River Valley," the theme song from one of his most famous movies.

"It's been a very rewarding 40 years for me and this has got to be the climax," said Fonda, 76, who had never won an Oscar. "I'm proud and very grateful to the organizers of the academy."

An honorary Oscar also went to "The Empire Strikes Back" for special effects, similar to the award given its predecessor "Star Wars." "Empire" also won the Oscar for best sound.

"Fame" won the best score and best song Oscars, with composer Michael Gore thanking his laborator and sister, 1950s teenage singer Lesley Gore — nominated with him for one of the lost entries, also from that film.

"Raging Bull" also won the editing award for Thelma Schoonmaker.

"Tess," Roman Polanski's version of Thomas Hardy's "Tess the D'Urbervilles," won art direction Oscars for Pierre Guffey and Jack Stephens, the costume design award for Anthony Powell and cinematography for Geoff Unsworth and Ghislain Cloquet.

"The Fly," a Hungarian production, won the Oscar for best adapted short and "The Doller Bottom" was picked best dramatic live action short.

"Moscow Does Not Believe in Tears," a Russian production, won the best foreign language Oscar which was accepted by a Soviet diplomat.

State faced with huge budget cuts

United Press International
AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby told the Senate Finance Committee Tuesday it must make the "hard choices" to trim about $39 million from the proposed budget for the next two years or face the prospect of raising taxes.

Hobby outlined to the committee members a list of "potential reductions" in the Senate plan including $13.1 million cut from Texas A&M University extension services and $169.6 million in proposed construction.

"You can trade off one hard choice for another, but about $39 million in hard choices have to be made, Hobby said."

The lieutenant governor estimated total available revenue, by the time the session draws to its final days in late May, will be $19.650 billion. He said the current spending bill totals $19.650 billion. In addition, Hobby said there are about $194.4 million in worthwhile potential additions to the spending bill, plus pending legislation involving another $198 million in new programs which should be approved.

Hobby suggested deleting $60 million from the proposed Senate appropriations for public education, $52.2 million from planned spending for the Teacher Retirement System and $48.1 million from junior college appropriations.

His suggested list of reductions also included cuts in proposed spending of $3.8 million from selected agency programs, $7.8 million from higher education faculty salary increases, $14.7 million from Mental Health and Mental Retardation salary increases and $25.1 million from state contributions for group insurance.

Hobby's list of potential additions to the Senate spending bill included $43 million to expand bilingual education programs to all 12 grades in public schools in compliance with a federal court order.
