Free Enterprise Center here hosting economics conference

By Michele Rowland
Battalion Reporter
Texas A&M University's Center for Education and Research in Free Enterprise is hosting a conference on economics education today and Saturday in an effort to help schools comply with the Economics Education Act of 1977.

The act mandates development of economic education programs in public schools and encourages state colleges and universities to help public school teachers plan curriculums through educational centers.

By showcasing effective economic programs at the conference, Dr. Sharon Colson, assistant to the director of the center, said she hoped teachers would begin to implement the ideas into their own curriculums.

Some of the programs to be presented as curriculum possibilities include integrating economics into American history classes, conducting a free enterprise day, developing a free enterprise summer institute, involving students in a classroom marketplace and incorporating economics with drilling for oil.

Dairy Day to feature milking contests

Cattle judging, food and a celebrity cow-milking contest will be featured Saturday at Dairy Day, to be sponsored by the Dairy Science Club.

The event will take place at the Dairy Center on Brazos County Road off Wellborn Highway, west of the Texas A&M University campus.

Nancy Surface, a junior dairy science major and secretary of the Dairy Science Club, said the activities will start at 8 a.m. with the district 4-H dairy cow judging contest. At 11 a.m., students from Dairy Science 202 classes will show Holstein and Jersey heifers.

A barbecue dinner and ball sale will take place between 1 and 2 p.m., followed by a celebrity cow-milking contest at 2:30 p.m. Surface said Texas A&M athletes, professors and campus personalities, including Dr. Dwayne A. Sater, associate dean of agricultural sciences, are scheduled to take part in the contest.

Surface said the event is being held to raise funds for the Dairy Science Club. Tickets for the event cost $4.25 and are available from members of the club or from the sales office in the Dairy Science Building.
