Ag college to present convocation

By COLETTE HUTCHINGS
Battalion Reporter
The Texas A&M College of Agriculture will present its annual Student Agricultural Convocation at 8 tonight in Rudder Theater.

The convocation, held since 1956, is sponsored by the Student Agriculture Council and the local chapter of Alpha Zeta, the agricultural honor society for outstanding students and faculty from the College of Agriculture.

Guest speaker for the convocation is author and lecturer Charlie Plumb, a former Vietnam prisoner of war.

Jeff Anthony, chairman of the convocation, said Plumb will speak on his experiences in Vietnam and how he survived captivity.

Anthony, who heard Plumb speak at an agricultural convention in Kansas, said, "He has a real personal message on day-to-day living. He explains how you can overcome anything."

Plumb is the author of two books about the Vietnam war entitled, "I'm No Hero" and "The Last Domino." He spent six years in a Vietnam prison camp after he was shot down during his 75th combat mission.

Several awards will be given to selected students in the College of Agriculture. Awards will be given by both Alpha Zeta and the College of Agriculture.

Alpha Zeta is awarding five $500 scholarships to students in the college and will choose one person to compete for a $1,500 National Alpha Zeta Foundation award. The recipient may compete with as many as 60 students chosen from other area Alpha Zeta chapters.

A $500 Eva Simmons Potts Memorial Scholarship will be awarded to an outstanding junior in the college. The scholarship is a memorial to the former wife of R.C. Potts, the former dean of the College of Agriculture.

Ten senior merit awards will be given to outstanding seniors, and Alpha Zeta will give certificates honoring one student from freshman, sophomore and junior classes in the college.

Students in the College of Agriculture will honor a faculty member with an outstanding professor award. Nominations for this award are made by the students, Anthony said.

In comparing agriculture of today to the past, Anthony said he believes there is a new agricultural movement in the United States.

For example, Anthony said he thinks that in 20 to 30 years the small family farmer will be obsolete. However, food production will become even more important as population increases cause the world hunger problem to become a greater concern.

The new agricultural movement is also affecting Texas A&M's College of Agriculture, Anthony said.

The College of Agriculture now has more people majoring in the business- and mechanical-related fields, he said.

However, the College of Agriculture, previously the second largest college at Texas A&M, is now the third largest. It follows the colleges of engineering and business administration.

The type of student enrolled in agriculture is changing, Anthony said. Although the majority of agriculture students come from rural towns, about 30 percent of the students now in the college are from cities.

Jury selection continues in Brilab bribery trial

United Press International
NEW ORLEANS—Jury selection resumes today in the federal Brilab case minus some of the topics that sparked dispute during the trial's first week.

Only two jurors were seated in five full days of work. Ten more jury members and six alternates are needed before testimony can begin.

Prosecutors trying to put reputed organized crime leader Carlos Marcello, former state Commissioner of Administration Charles Roemer and three other defendants behind bars fought for and won the right to ask prospective jurors how they felt about wiretapping and other forms of secret surveillance.

Other questions leading to vocal fireworks concerned extensive pretrial publicity encouraged by government leaks and Marcello's alleged involvement in the Kennedy assassination.

Joining Marcello and Roemer as defendants in the case are longtime state official Aubrey Young, Washington lobbyist I. Irving Davidson and New Orleans attorney Vincent Marinello.

The five men are charged with trying to use bribery to win lucrative state insurance contracts from governments or trade unions. During a year-long undercover operation, FBI agents gathered more than 1,400 reels of tape and 45,000 pages of transcript to support its charges.
