New Orleans needs $26 million to host 1984 World's Fair

NEW ORLEANS — With an ever-present deadline hanging over their heads, Louisiana's politicians and business leaders frantically scrambled to raise $26 million in pledges to underwrite the 1984 New Orleans World's Fair.

Contacted late Tuesday night, officials of the Louisiana World Exposition expressed optimism that the goal could be met.

"We won't know for sure until the morning," said Peter Spurney, executive vice president and general manager of the World's Fair. "But things look good. We're confident we'll have it."

The money is required by the U.S. Commerce Department to make good any losses if the projected six-month fair does not break even. If the pledges are not raised the project is dead for 1984.

Up until last week, World's Fair organizers had raised $13 million. But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said that was insufficient and requested an additional $13 million before the proposed riverfront project could become a reality.

Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said he had raised $1 million in pledges for the project, and Sen. Russell Long, D-La., pledged $100,000 of his own money.

Johnston, in New Orleans for an energy convention of the Edison Electric Institute, said Commerce had more than doubled the amount needed to underwrite the fair with very short notice.

"It came as a complete surprise. There is nothing really we can do about it at this point," he said. "I think we can do it if this community will pull together, if it does as it has in the past. I think it will and I think we'll get the world's fair."
