the State of Texas or Platoro Limited of Indiana, a salvage company for which Burke worked — seemed fair and impartial.
The mayor, who has been known in some circles as "The Pirate" since the suit first was filed in 1968, believes he is entitled to about $40,000 of the approximately $1.5 million worth of gold and silver coins and other artifacts that went down with a Spanish galleon more than 400 years ago.
U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton presided over a hearing in Odessa last week that included testimony from officials of the Indiana salvage company and lawyers for the State of Texas.
The judge is working out conditions of the settlement and has promised a decision by the end of this week. The case has been in and out of federal court for 14 years.
Burke said he considers himself a Robin Hood of the seas, but does not intend to give away his part of the treasure he helped uncover from the wrecked galleon in 1967.

He was engaged by Platoro Limited to help with the salvage operation after Platoro divers found the wreck less than 2 miles from the north jetty at Port Mansfield, Texas, near South Padre Island.
After the state's land commissioner, then Jerry Sadler, sought an injunction against the group to stop salvage operations, Burke earned his title as "The Pirate."
Sadler hired a patrol boat to monitor any further activity at the site.
Burk would anchor his own boat near the site and proceed to put on a show. He said he would wrestle with a seat cushion within sight of the patrol boat to make it appear he had brought up another chunk of valuable hardware from the galleon.
Burke admits he did it simply to antagonize Sadler and never really uncovered any additional treasure.
At a news conference, the land commissioner said the continuing salvaging operations was "a pirating expedition." As a result of that quote, Burke's friends soon dubbed him "The Pirate."
"I rather enjoy being called a pirate, because it's my nature," Burke said, "but I'm a benevolent pirate."
Burke said he plans to appeal the Platoro case to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals if he does not get a claim on the salvage. But he said he was optimistic about the judge's forthcoming decision, adding that the Odessa hearing was a fair and impartial one.
The state claims custody of the treasure because the items were found in navigable waters off the Texas Coast. State lawyers argued that the gold and silver items are historic relics and should be stored in state museums.

ter serving one year of the term a former mayor.
In "The Pirate's" first year at the helm of Rio Hondo, he obtained new water treatment plant for town. But he complained that press of civic duty is cutting into treasure hunting and crimping "pirating ways."

'Pirate' says $40,000 from galleon is his, not Texas

United Press International
RIO HONDO, Texas — Jeff Burke — a crop duster, treasure hunter and mayor of Rio Hondo — has waited 14 years for his share of treasure from a Spanish galleon, but his wait may be nearing an end.

Burke, the 58-year-old Rio Hondo native who was re-elected last week for a second round as mayor of the fishing village, says a hearing in federal court in Odessa, Texas, on who owns the treasure trove —

Burke said the state's claim on the Platoro treasure is based on a bunch of "mumbo jumbo. The state's statutes are illegal as hell where they pertain to wrecks of the sea."

United Press International
AUSTIN — A move to designate the armadillo as the official state mammal is a reptilian scheme honoring a "lowly, muddling, cowardly" animal, the leading citizen of Luckenbach contends.

Television personality Guich Koock wrote Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby urging defeat of the effort initiated by Houston school children to honor the armadillo, and suggested instead the state proclaim the unicorn as the official state animal.

"The unicorn represents the true Texas spirit," Koock said. "The unicorn is gentle, friendly and loves virgins."
His description of the armadillo is considerably less flattering.
"This beast, if I may dignify the armadillo by calling it a beast, does not in any way signify the nature of true Texans. First, they are hard headed. An armadillo's head is harder than 8th grade arithmetic," Koock said.
"In addition, the armadillo is grubby. That's because he's always eatin' grubs."
"Thirdly, and this is real bad, he's an edentate animal and is also antediluvian."

Koock said nobody wants to keep an armadillo around, said the animals "can't race with cowchips." And last, Koock said "armadillos make lousy chili."
He urged Hobby and Texas legislators to vote against the alien armadillo, which never had a foot in the Lone Star State until was introduced under cover of darkness by the late unimpaired Governor Edmund J. Davis in 1871. As loyal Democrats, you recognize this was a vile Republican plot. If memory serves me Davis was the last Republican governor of Texas.
