Reagan returns from hospital | Hinckley may have

United Press International WASHINGTON — With a wave and a nile, President Reagan walked out of the hostal Saturday and was whisked back to the White House a dozen days after a gunman ried to kill him.

Reagan, wearing a bright red cardigan and high spirits, shunned the normal wheelchair xit of a hospital patient.

"I walked in here and I'm going to walk out," he jokingly told some 75 doctors, nurses and orderlies massed in the lobby before stepng into a waiting limousine. He was flanked yfirst lady Nancy Reagan and daughter Patti

The president, shot in the chest March 30 in assassination attempt, looked thin and oved stiffly Saturday, but was obviously ppy to return to the White House to finish

This looks like a nice place," the president id as he arrived home in a light spring rain. Vice President George Bush led a crowd of f members gathered beneath umbrellas at White House portico to welcome him. One le said Reagan "looked tremendous."

Doctors at the George Washington Medical ter discharged the president when a final ies of chest X-rays showed that a spot on his tlung was clearing up. They said it probably was dried blood or tissue.

"Things should move along very quickly now," said Dr. Dennis O'Leary, chief of clinic-

O'Leary estimated it would take four to eight months, perhaps longer, before Reagan was "totally back to normal." But he said the ident could start working half days in the Oval Office next week and might make a helicopter trip to Camp David, the presidential retreat, in a week or 10 days.

Doctors told the president at 7:25 a.m. that they were discharging him. That was just as well, because according to White House depu-ty chief of staff Michael Deaver, Reagan informed the doctors, "I've already made up my

The president followed the hospital rules of a wheelchair ride only as far as the elevator when he quit his third-floor hospital suite at midmorning. He emerged from the elevator into the lobby, then out the door, on his feet. Reflecting increased concern over the president's safety, some 100 Secret Service agents and police were deloyed in the hospital lobby and around the entrance when Reagan emerged into a light spring rain. Standing expressionless just behind the president was Secret Service agent Jerry Parr, the man who shoved Reagan into his waiting imousine when the shots rang out at the Washington Hilton 12 days earlier.

The presidential motorcade passed several hundred waving passers-by as it wound its way a half-mile downtown.

The shots that wounded Reagan and three others were fired from a crowd of reporters and bystanders which gathered to watch the president leave a Washington hotel after giving a

White House press secretary James Brady, wounded in the head, was the only one of Reagan's fellow victims who remained hospit-

Police officer Thomas Delahanty was discharged from the Washington Hospital Center about the same time the president left George Washington hospital. Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy went home at midweek.

Brady is "making excellent progress," O'Leary said. "Mentally he is virtually almost 100 percent of what he was before all this happened. The return of personality is evolving steadily; it is very far along.

"He is a little subdued now, but we think it is a pretty good sign because it means he is in touch with reality."

stalked Carter: FBI

United Press International WASHINGTON — The FBI believes John W. Hinckley Jr., charged with trying to assassinate President Reagan, stalked President Carter last fall, the New York Times reported

An FBI spokesman refused to comment on the report.

The Times said the agency's extensive background check on Hinckley since the March 30 wounding of the president outside a Washington hotel has led agents to the conclusion the drifter, 25, also tracked Carter.

The newspaper said there was no conclusive evidence linking Hinckley to Carter, though records of the suspect's travels and eyewitness accounts suggest to the FBI he may have considered attacking the former

Hinckley reportedly fol-lowed Carter to Nashville and Chicago during last fall's campaign and also may have stalked him in Washington in September, December and January. Hinckley was arrested Oct. 9 at the Nashville Metropolitan Airport for carrying three concealed weapons just before he was to board a flight to New
