Atlanta run homosexual ex-con checked

United Press International
ATLANTA — Police snoopers in the most recent murder scene reportedly are running computer checks of homosexual ex-cons in their search for leads in slayings and disappearances of black youths.

The special police task force investigating the cases is comparing the addresses of former mates with the addresses of body locations of the victims, Atlanta Constitution reported.

The newspaper said ex-prisoners who live near any of the victims and are considered homosexuals could face questioning.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said last week there is no evidence to indicate the killings were homosexually related. But Brown added, "I have to look at all possibilities."

The latest victim, Larry Rogers, 21, was found Thursday in an abandoned, two-story apartment building in southwest Atlanta.

Detectives were at first optimistic they would find some solid evidence from the scene. Rogers only the second victim to be found indoors.

But Sunday night the investigators said their search had turned up nothing.

"There are some good fingerprints, but since it was an abandoned house anybody could have stayed inside," said Dr. Larry Howard, head of the State Crime Lab. "They (fingerprints) have to be examined and taken away. No, we still don't have a damn thing. If it had been copied, we'd be in much better shape."

However, he said crime technicians still had "three or four" days of work ahead of them and there is still a chance they will find some significant evidence at the house.

Conservatives attack demo leaders

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The conservative group that claimed most of the liberal trophies of the 1980 election Monday put three Democratic House leaders and a senator on a new "hit list" — saying they are obstructing President Reagan's economic program.

John T. Dolan of the National Conservative Political Action Committee said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.; House Democratic Leader Jim Wright of Texas; Budget Committee chairman Jim Jones of Oklahoma; and Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski are first targets of the group's effort to assist passage of the Reagan program.

"This list is just a beginning and we hope to expand it as time goes on," Dolan said.

He said the Reagan budget cuts "are too modest," but added that "the President's program is our best hopes to restore the American economy — an economy almost destroyed by politicians like Senator Sarbanes and Congressman Wright, Rostenkowski and Jones."

He said his group would spend an initial $450,000 against Wright, $400,000 against Sarbanes, and $100,000 against Jones and $50,000 against Rostenkowski.

He gave a preview of anti-Sarbanes television ads that will be run in Washington starting Wednesday. They call Sarbanes, up for re-election in 1982, "the biggest spender in the Senate," and charge that "He voted to raise your taxes a staggering $249 billion."

Dolan took exception to questions describing Jones as a conservative, saying the Oklahoman had come up with a deeper cutting alternative to the Reagan budget plan "only to save some of the Great Society programs."

He said NCPAC polls showed that none of the four Democrats "truly represents his district" and said they found that "the most popular man in Maryland is Ronald Reagan."

Dolan said the NCPAC attack on the three Democratic leaders is both an attempt to beat them and to frighten rank-and-file Democrats who might hold less safe seats.

"Senator Everett Dirksen used to say, 'When I feel the heat, I begin to see the light,'" Dolan said.
