Assassination is subject of bill

United Press International
AUSTIN — A Corpus Christi legislator says the attempt on President Reagan's life is the most convincing evidence that legislation is needed to ensure people do not get away with murder — particularly of legislators.

Rep. Ken Riley, R-Corpus Christi, has introduced a bill making it a capital offense to kill a legislator.

"We generally don't rate for assassination attempts but you never know when they might get off the president and start working on the legislators," Riley said.

"If anybody shoots me, I want them to face capital murder charges."

His bill, which also classifies capital offense the murder of a person holding an elective office, would put legislators in the same category as police and firemen killed in the line of duty and prison guards during an escape attempt.

The bill is waiting a hearing in the House Criminal Justice Committee.

Riley said he felt the legislation was needed long before Reagan shooting but the assassination attempt had a "cooling effect."

"You never know — you might have a mental problem when you have exposure to legislative process, you try to make some people happy, some people mad," he said.

Under current law, a convicted of killing a legislator subject to the same punishment as a person convicted of killing a private citizen. He cannot be sentenced to death unless a slaying occurs during the commission of another felony, such as armed robbery.

In an irrational world, his bill makes sense.

The legislator said he has received a number of death threats but did get one unsettling "action."

"I got one insinuation on legislation I introduced," he said, refusing to comment on legislation. "I don't want to see any fuel to the fire."

He has also introduced legislation making it a capital offense to prosecute an attorney or a tant prosecuting attorney.
