Career Center is sponsoring health jobs day

By KITTY FRALEY

The Career Planning and Placement Center is sponsoring "Health Career Opportunities Day" Thursday in Rudder Tower Exhibit Hall.

The program is designed to let students and faculty members learn about career opportunities available in health-related fields. John R. Gudelman, Jr., assistant director of the Career Planning and Placement Center at Texas A&M University, said.

Gudelman said he decided to initiate the program when students came to him and asked about possible jobs in medicine that didn't necessarily require a medical degree.

"I don't think the vast majority of students know that there are a variety of fields in the medical profession that are open to them," Gudelman said. "I didn't even know all the facets of the field until I started working on this program."

Allied Health encompasses any field or career related to the health care of the population and 23 Allied Health organizations will be participating in the program.

Some of the organizations include Prairie View A&M College of Nursing, Scott and White Memorial Hospital in Temple, University of Texas at San Antonio occupational and physical therapy programs and the University of Houston College of Optometry.

The participating organizations will open their booths in the exhibit hall at 9 a.m. and will stay open until 5 p.m., and any department on campus may also have a booth.

Two speakers will also be part of the program. Quinton Smith, coordinator of Allied Health and Continuing Education at the Baylor College of Medicine, will speak at 11 a.m.

Brig. Gen. Andre J. Ognibene, commanding general at Brooke Army Medical Center in San Antonio, will speak at 3 p.m.

"We recognize that a number of students are pursuing pre-professional programs at this University and there is no centralized counseling service for them," Gayle Schmidt, coordinator of community health programs at Texas A&M and associate professor in the health and physical education department, said.

These students have to find out information on what they can from whom they can, she said, but this program will give both students and faculty first-hand information about different areas in the medical field.

"We want students to know that viable career opportunities exist for students with a degree in chemistry, biology, or even zoology," Schmidt said.

Two speakers picked for lecture series

By RACHEL BOSTWICK

Two of the four speakers for the 1981-82 University Lecture Series have been selected.

They are Dr. George F. Bass, professor of nautical archeology at Texas A&M University and Dr. John Ziman, professor at the University of Bristol in England. Both men will speak at Texas A&M in November.

The four lectures are sponsored each year by the University Lecture Committee, committee chairman Donald McDonald said. Three of the lectures are co-sponsored by the different colleges and one lecture is given by a faculty member at Texas A&M.

The 16-member committee is made up of representatives chosen from each college, from the library and three students chosen by the student body president and the University Lecture Coordinator.

The chairman is then chosen by Dr. J.M. Prescott, vice president for academic affairs.

The faculty lectures began in 1968 when Dr. Haskell Monroe, then an associate professor in American history, and some of his colleagues thought it would be a good idea to honor some of the outstanding members of the Texas A&M faculty, McDonald said.

The other lectures probably evolved from this, he added.

McDonald said the committee usually tries to publish all the faculty lectures. The lecturer keeps most of the copies, he said, but copies are available in the library.

The other two speakers haven't been chosen yet. "The people that we want are the people that are in demand," McDonald said.

D-1 wins best unit award for 1980-81

Naval ROTC Company D-1 has been recognized as the top unit in Texas A&M University's 1980-81 Corps of Cadets.

The company, commanded by Tim Lyda of College Station, won the Gen. George F. Moore cord and flag, presented annually to the best overall unit in the Corps. It is the highest award a company-level Corps unit can achieve. The award, named for the late Texas A&M commandant and Corregidor march leader, was awarded at Parents' Day review.

Also sharing the spotlight were Company D-2, led by Joe Blanda of Orange, and Squadron 12 under Ted Jarrett of Mission.

D-2 won the Bruno Hochmuth cord and flag for the best drilled company. Squadron 12 was winner of the George P.F. Jouine flag for the best record in scholastic achievement and improvement.

Unit awards are based on school-year-long, Corps-wide competition. The Moore flag, guidon streamer and citation cord is awarded on the basis of academics, military proficiency and campus activities participation.

Companies D-1 and D-2 and Squadron 12 will carry the flags on marches until Parents' Day 1982. Company D-1 also was runner-up for the Jouine flag.

Among other awards was the President's flag, presented to the 5th Battalion commanded by Jacob Harrison of Haughton, Ga., for the battalion or group with the highest scholastic standing. The battalion is made up of companies C-2, D-1, H-2, N-1 and P-2.

The 1st Regiment color guard won the Gen. O.R. Simpson streamer for best color guard of the year. "B" Battery of the Aggie Band, under Wes Klett of Hereford, received the March-to-the-Brazos streamer for raising the most money for March of Dimes.

In other awards ceremonies outstanding cadets in the 1980-81 Corps were recognized. They included:

— Thomas Jumper, Corps inspector general, San Antonio, recipient of the Dallas A&M Mothers' Club saber to the best staff officer.

— Bill Jones, 1st Brigade commander, Houston, Raeburn Foundation saber, outstanding major unit commander.

— Mark S. Retzlaff, 3rd Group commander, San Antonio, Texas chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy saber, outstanding battalion or group commander.

— Samuel Hawes, Company A-1 commander, Dallas, Dr. John H. Fritz cup, saber and medal, outstanding company or squadron commander.

— Scott W. Jordan, Company D-1 first sergeant, Lake Jackson, Bank of A&M saber and medal, outstanding first sergeant.

— Michael W. Holmes, Company P-2, Grand Prairie, Federation of Texas A&M Mothers' Clubs cup and medal, outstanding sophomore cadet.

— Brian D. Terrell, Squadron 6, Plainview, Meyer-Raeburn Foundation medal and $150 scholarship, outstanding freshman cadet.
