Jazz, modern ballet dances on stage Thursday

By SHEILA FRAZIER
Battalion Reporter

The Dance Arts Society of Texas A&M University performed 12 dance routines ranging from ballet to aerobic dance in Rudder Theater Thursday night.

The show, an annual spring event, was presented to a supportive audience of about 350 people. Dance arts society teachers choreographed the dances.

The evening opened with a slow and graceful modern dance set to Bette Midler's hit "The Rose."

Review

The second dance reversed the mood with a fast-paced ballet. The dancers, dressed in bright turquoise, accentuated the double-time beat with tambourines.

Eerie, glowing green and black set the tone for a jazz dance to "The Monster Mash." The dancer's faces were painted and their jaws bulged with plastic vampire teeth.

Two accomplished ballet dancers performed to a delicate song named "Echoes." A male and female duo then danced to a sunny, jazz melody.

In the sixth dance a group did "the monkey" and "the swim" in rolled-up jeans and T-shirts to the Beach Boys' hit "Surfin' U.S.A." An aerobic dance was done by a group to the partying song "Celebrate."

The next act confused the audience when a young man in a homemade tutu made his way across the stage with attempted ballet moves. The intention and result was a comedy of errors as the other ballerinas purposely goofed dramatic leaps, sabotaged each other and collided together.

"Hell is for Children" was the music for an emotional, modern dance solo which was followed by a group jazzing through a soul-type tune.

Two women and one man tap danced to the "Chattanooga Choo Choo." The closing dance, swinging and modern, was done by a group to a suspenseful song called "Tornado."

At the conclusion of the show, flowers were presented to the society dance teachers Gina Geiger, Nancy Malone, Connie Norton, Shawna Siler and Sharon Stokes.

Flowers were also presented to the society's officers: President Dove Lyons, Vice-President Dawn White and Treasurer Adriana Meza. Susan Dittman was announced as president for the coming year.
