Police theorize children trusted killer

United Press International
ATLANTA — Police say the killer or killers of 26 young blacks may have made contact with the victims prior to their slayings because most of the bodies show no signs of struggle.
"The victim trusts him, feels comfortable with him. There's no reason to suspect him or fear him," one investigator close to the case said Sunday.

The killer probably is not a person close to the young blacks but could be making casual contact and arranging to meet at a later time, possibly offering money for a job to be performed in the future, or be making a sex-for-hire proposition, authorities said Sunday.
"That's a possibility I don't think we can rule out," the investigator said.

In a series of 10 slayings since the first of the year, only one of the victims — Terry Lorenzo Pue, 15 — showed signs of struggling with his killer. Abrasions were found on Pue's elbows and minor bruises on his head.
A source close to the investigation said it was "pure speculation" that the killer or killers were acquainted with the victims, "but you've got to consider the fact that none of the (youths) put up a struggle."

It depends on the child, and many of them have been called "street-smart" and looked for ways to make money," the source added. "It's very possible they could have been attracted by the murderer."
"You can't overlook it," he said.

"We've thought of that before — that it's someone who's close to the victim). And then again, we have no witnesses seeing them. We don't know if they're in a vehicle or being picked up on foot. I see this all the time where you've got men and women walking to a car with a child and you assume it's family."

Meanwhile, the Rev. John L. Thompson, the Atlanta Police Bureau chaplain, said police officers and their families also are suffering because of the slayings of 26 young blacks and the disappearance of another — Darron Glass, 10 — in the past 21 months.
"They (police officers) have taken it so personally," he said.

Dems helping, leader says

United Press International
WASHINGTON — House Democratic leader Jim Wright said Monday the American people want Congress to cooperate with President Reagan, but not "take orders from him" in drafting a federal budget.
Wright, speaking to the National Press Club, said a Democratic alternative budget is "an honest effort to embrace the best parts of the president's recommendations and to improve upon the other parts."

He said Democratic leaders of the House have tried to be cooperative and have not been obstructionists in the struggle to develop a federal budget.
"The American people expect their Congress to be cooperative, conciliatory and helpful. They want us to work with the president, and that is our duty," Wright said.
"They do not expect us to take orders from him, however popular and charismatic a figure he may be. For that would be dictatorship," he said.

Wright acknowledged that last November's election was a mandate for "constructive change" and to improve the nation's productivity, but argued it was not a mandate for specific actions.
"The public wants the government to stop abuses in the welfare program, in the food stamp program, in the student loan program," he said. "The public did not say it wanted us to stop the programs entirely."
The House is presently considering two budget proposals: the Reagan measure modified with additional spending cuts and a Democratic plan that restores some funds to social programs.
The Reagan proposal would end several federal programs that the Democratic plan would pare down but keep alive.

Eddie Chiles gets another 'mad' ad

United Press International
FORT WORTH — Oilman Eddie Chiles is mad again.
Chiles, who also owns the Texas Rangers, had paid for broadcast advertisements criticizing governmental bureaucracy during the Carter administration and distributed red bumper stickers proclaiming "I'm mad, too, Eddie" to supporters.
He stopped his campaign when Ronald Reagan was elected.

But now the owner of the Western Co. of North America is angry at House Majority Leader Jim Wright — who he thinks is sabotaging President Reagan's efforts to turn the economy around.
In a full-page advertisement in Sunday's Fort Worth Star-Telegram, Chiles lashed out at Wright for leading a Democratic group with an alternative budget plan.

He said Wright was being about as effective for the people of the 12th Congressional District as "a screen door on a submarine."
"They (12th District voters) elected President Reagan to get a certain job done and because they liked his program," Chiles said. "Now Congressman Wright is working against that program."
Chiles said he will have bumper stickers made that say "I'm mad at you, too, Jim" as part of his latest campaign against Wright.
In 1979, Chiles attacked Wright for his stands on energy and at that time, Wright said Chiles was on an "ego trip" and felt the 12th District congressmen should be owned by Chiles' company.
