Bentsen advocates 'universal service'

United Press International DALLAS — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen thinks many American youths are drifting and have not decided what "productive" role they should fill in a society he believes obligates its members to the nation.

With both ideas in mind, the senator says all American youths should be required to serve the nation in some kind of universal service.

"If someone is going to accept this country's benefits, then that person has an obligation to this country," Bentsen said in a telephone interview from his Washington office. "Patriotism is not just a sometime thing. It's something we ought to live in our daily lives."

Bentsen, D-Texas, admits his political view is in the minority but said universal service to the United States, particularly by teen-agers who have yet to decide upon a career, should be required.

"It does not have to be in the military. It could be in some other form of service to one's country, but I believe that that obligation should be fulfilled."

The senator said he does not have a specific bill or body of legislation in mind and while there is some support in Congress for universal service, it's not nearly enough to pass such controversial legislation.

"I could name a number of senators who support it, but we're not a majority," he said. "I think too that something that would have helped a great deal would be if the administration would support it, but the administration is not of that position now."

The subject arose during the Texas UPI Editors Association convention on South Padre Island recently. In a question-and-answer session following his speech, Bentsen was asked about the direction of the U.S. military.

He said the U.S. Army should not be a "Job Corps with tanks" nor an employer "of last resort" for the young people of the United States.

Bentsen then mentioned his belief in "universal military service" by all of the nation's youth, and his awareness such a proposal would not stand a chance in Congress anytime soon. Those listening to him, primarily managing editors of Texas newspapers, were in substantial sympathy with him. During the telephone interview, Bentsen expanded on the idea. "For some time I have felt a volunteer army is not getting some of the kinds of people we need in the service today," Bentsen, who was a bomber during World War II.

"And we are seeing a decline in those who are classified as No. 2 category, those in the average category. There has been an increase in categories three and four."

"We have to find a way to do that because of the sophistication of some of our weaponry. Some attention must be directed to that. I think we have to give serious consideration to some general training, universal military service of kind."

Bentsen said he has been "for some time now... rich and poor alike have an obligation to service to this country."

"I also think (universal service) helps people by the discipline it brings about, and it's a reward to parents of the contribution they have to make to live in this country of ours, to keep it a safe and great and free country."

Representative writes bill to honor Vietnam vets

United Press International AUSTIN — Seeing the fanfare given the American hostages upon their release from Iran, Rep. Larry Don Shaw felt some way should be found to honor Vietnam veterans who had returned home without celebration.

Shaw, a Democratic freshman lawmaker from Big Spring, did not fight in the Vietnam war and said it took the release of the hostages to prompt him to find a way to better remember those who did.

"I saw the film clips of the Vietnam veterans and saw how they had been forgotten," Shaw said. "I just wanted to honor the veterans and help bolster their morale."

Shaw, 28, met Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans President Dan Jordan and soon realized the greatest monument to Vietnam veterans would be help in overcoming the effects of the defoliant Agent Orange.

His introduction of legislation regarding the defoliant, and its subsequent passage by the Texas Legislature, have led to inquiries from across the nation.

Through Jordan, Shaw had learned about Agent Orange and the defoliant's routine use in Vietnam between 1962 and 1971. Ground troops routinely inhaled the substance, which contains dioxin, and now those veterans believe some of their current medical and emotional problems were caused by Agent Orange.

Dioxin is a toxic substance suspected of causing cancer; genetic damage, nervous disorders and digestive problems.

"I saw the data on suicides by Vietnam veterans and the birth defects suffered by their children," he said. "I was really taken back."

Shaw then introduced legislation to require physicians treating Vietnam veterans possibly exposed to Agent Orange to submit to the Texas Department of Health medical reports on each patient. The bill also authorizes the Texas attorney general to file lawsuits against the federal government if it does not want to provide medical records or reports on Agent Orange to veterans who request that information.

During a committee hearing before the legislation approved, Vietnam veterans and their families crowded into a room and testified they fathered children with physical deformities because of their exposure to Agent Orange.

Rayma Whited Plummer, a legislator she and her husband had a normal child before he went to Vietnam. Upon his return he had three more children, and wide whom suffer severe physical and emotional problems. Mrs. Plummer said her husband later died of cancer "that consumed 100 percent of his body."

Both the House and Senate unanimously approved the legislation.

Clark of College Inquiries from legislators in California, Minnesota, Ohio, Michigan, Oklahoma and New York want to start the same program together.

"Most of those people are the men of their veteran affairs offices," he said. "I've sent them copies of the bill since they were pattern their legislation after ours."

News organizations from Australia, which sent troops to Vietnam, also talked to the legislators about some of the problems that affect the country's veterans have countered because of their exposure to Agent Orange while serving in Southeast Asia.

Waters receding after flood in Polk County

United Press International LIVINGSTON — Flooding caused by heavy rains and the collapse of two earthen dams on Shoat Creek forced evacuation of more than 100 families from their homes Sunday, but most high waters had receded by Monday.

No injuries were reported. Polk County Sheriff's Deputy Bob Grissom said most of the families — 30 evacuated to the Onalaska school and 60 to 80 families taken to the Goodrich and Livingston schools — were able to return home today.

"Everything is open in the county," Grissom said. "The water is receding. We're in pretty good shape this morning."

Grissom said two of three private earthen dams in the Crystal Lake subdivision on Shoat Creek 4 miles upstream from Livingston broke in the 5-to 13-inch rains the Trinity River basin.

The breaks in the dams caused about 10 feet high and 100 feet long, sent 4 feet of water over U.S. 59 and Texas 146 in Livingston, Grissom said.

"It got in about five or six businesses and three homes in Livingston," Grissom said. "All three dams broke three years ago, Grissom said. The previous experience contributed to early warning of the dam breaks to reduce damage, he said."

Timely evacuations also occurred around and immediately below Lake Livingston, a 30-mile-long lake about 5 miles west of Livingston and 60 miles north of Houston, Grissom said.
