Cult members converted St gradually, researchers sa

DALLAS — Members of cults like the Rev. Sun Moon's Unification Church or Charles Manson's "family" usually are converted by a subtle and gradual process rather than by the sudden emotional and physical coercion, two University of Texas at Dallas researchers contend.

'The dominant view of cults as unique and extreme, as deviant and strange, obscures the common cultural elements that are shared by cults and the dominant cultures that give rise to them," said Lawrence J. Redlinger, associate professor of political economy and sociology at UTD.

He said it would be arrogant to assume those outside cults acquire their beliefs and goals differently from the way those within cults acquire theirs. Redlinger and fellow UTD professor Philip K. Armour studied religious cults and reviewed 26 similar studies to identify five mechanisms present in most conversions: -offering a new view of reality or "plausibility structure" that serves as the basis for personal interaction and direction; -reducing the converts dependencies to their childhood level and transferring them to a cult

-using role models to represent appropriate behavior and its potential benefits; -isolating the convert from his past in a "community of the present" designed by the cult; — interpreting events in the convert's past to

Dads fight for child custody

United Press International HOUSTON — The National Congress for Men, a group of several hundred divorced fathers from dozens of states, is trying to end sexist stereotypes in child custody cases We want to take responsibility in raising our children. We want to be involved in the care and rearing of them after divorce," spokesman Curtis E. Posey said.

The group held its first meeting during the weekend, discussing what it said was biases and injustices in the divorce courts.

'It's not a spoken bias (against fathers), but it's there and it is so bad that often the man's attorney will try to talk him out custody of children," Posey Posey, an account executive with a brokerage firm in Houston, is a divorced father and the "possessory conservator" of a 5-year-old son. Under Texas law, that means "I am charged with taking care of emergencies, but other than that I don't have any more input than visiting gra rents" in raising his son, he said.

The most prevalent bias men confront in di Posey said, is an outdated stereof procedings, that almost always results in mothers gettingous of children. 'It's not that men can't raise their children fore, though, men used to go to work and wo used to stay home and it was easier to give custo women," he said. But women are in the workforce as much as now, so the situation is one where both are wo Posey said the group "is not in any kind of agreement or conflict with the women's movement as responsible." We view them and their movement as responsible. ble.
