Talks still deadlocked

WASHINGTON — Despite the presence of Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan in the baseball talks, negotiations still have accomplished nothing.

Donovan took part in Tuesday's two sessions, but negotiators went their separate ways at 5:30 p.m. with nothing changed.

Another session is scheduled for 10 a.m. today, but observers see no signs any meaningful progress might take place.

The news blackout imposed Monday evening by Donovan is being observed by both sides. Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, would not talk about the meetings when he left the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service offices Tuesday afternoon, but did air some thoughts.

Asked if he thought the blackout was appropriate, Miller answered, "For the time being."

He would not comment on whether any progress was made in Tuesday's talks. Asked if he would be staying in Washington even if no session were scheduled for today, Miller answered, "Probably."

National League Player Representative Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies just smiled and said, "I always feel good," when asked how he felt about Tuesday's talks.

Donovan spoke to the National Urban League at a Washington hotel while the two sides broke for lunch Tuesday, but even he was noncommittal about what took place.

"I didn't talk about the baseball strike to the Urban League," said Donovan.

Their battle to save the remainder of the 1981 baseball season, nearly one-fourth of which has been lost to the strike, has been fruitless.

The two sides met separately and jointly during Tuesday's two sessions, which lasted more than six hours. Donovan has not taken an active part in the negotiations, but has sat in on all sessions at which Federal mediator Kenneth Moffett was present.

Nancy Broff, acting FMCS general counsel, reported to the media briefly following the breakup of Tuesday's session.

"We have had separate and joint meetings with the secretary attending all sessions where mediators were present," Broff said. "Because of the news blackout, I can't report on the substance of any of the meetings. But you name it and we had it so far as meetings are concerned."

Broff explained she meant the two sides had met jointly, separately with the mediators and separately in caucus.

Earl Campbell praised for early report to camp

SAN ANGELO, Texas — A Houston Oilers official said All-Pro running back Earl Campbell reported to training camp Tuesday — one day ahead of the deadline for veterans to report.

"It is extremely refreshing in today's era that there are young men like Earl who recognize their responsibilities and live up to them," said Oilers general manager Ladd Herzog. "Earl and his representative, Witt Stewert, both deserve the highest praise and consideration for the manner in which they have handled this matter."

Campbell earlier this year unsuccessfully tried to renegotiate his contract with the Oilers, and at one point said he would set out the season if not paid more money.

"I've been fortunate to have some God-given talents which allow me to make a good living, but like everyone else, I'd like to provide more for my family,"

Campbell said. "However, there are things more important to me than money. I don't want anyone to say Earl let his teammates down."

Aggie SID honored

Spec Gammon, the Sports Information Director for the Texas A&M University Athletic Department, has won two national awards for his football publications.

It was announced recently by the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Gammon took second place in the District VI competition for his 1980 football press guide, and was third in the district for the 1980 Texas A&M football programs.

District VI encompasses the entire state of Texas and parts of Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi.

The CoSIDA publications awards are considered one of the highest honors a sports information director can receive as his work is judged by members of the media. Publications are judged on content, design and effectiveness.

Gammon has been the Sports Information Director at Texas A&M since 1964, and has won numerous awards of this type in his career.
