Martin faces grand jury

United Press International
AUSTIN — Rep. Mike Martin, R-Longview — who twice shunned subpoenas to testify — voluntarily answered questions before a Travis County grand jury for half an hour but offered no new information about a shooting he allegedly staged to further his political career.

Martin, 29, smiled briefly at reporters at the courthouse Tuesday before he was whisked into a side hallway that led to the grand jury room. He was accompanied on the drive from Longview by his mother, brother and a family friend.

The freshman legislator had said he wanted to discuss the case after speaking before the grand jury. However, an investigator with the district attorney's office said Martin later changed his mind.

Assistant District Attorney H. Allen Hill said Martin answered questions before the grand jury for about an hour, but would not comment on what was said.

Hill did say no indictments against Martin or others involved in the case would be forthcoming soon.

"I think he resolved a lot of questions just by showing up," Hill said.

Charles Goff, Martin's cousin, gave police a statement last week saying that he had fired four shotgun blasts at Martin in the pre-dawn hours of July 31. Goff said he intentionally wounded Martin in the left arm and that the attack was meant to further Martin's chances at gaining a Senate seat. Goff was the next witness before the grand jury after Martin.

However Martin, who at one point said a satanic cult was behind the shooting, denies Goff's claims. Martin now maintains that the attack was made by his Gregg

County political enemies, apparently to ruin his career.

Clutching the belts of three investigators from the district attorney's office, Martin was pulled through a horde of reporters and out of the courthouse.

His brother, Walter, drove him away from the courthouse in a motor home.

Hill said Martin was not expected to appear before the panel again but that he was confident the case would be resolved. He said any indictments handed out in the case would be done so together.

'Whorehouse' author satirizes legislature

United Press International
NEW YORK — Only the man who co-authored "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" could be expected to handle the Lone Star State Legislature with the same touch of reverence and respect.

Larry L. King, after all, speaks Texan even better than Houstonian anchorman Dan Rather, and he speaks it "right good" as they would say in the land of the armadillo and the Alamo tonight on "CBS Reports."

"I've been writing about Texas — kicking it, cheering it, bragging on it — longer than I care to remember," King says in opening the hour-long look into the corridors of power where Texas politicians "cut deals and take names." The result is a far cry from what the average school child learns in his civics class.

The civics class never taught anyone about the two-fisted lobbyists who outnumber Texas lawmakers, 8 to 1. The civics class never went into the wheeling and dealing, the shootouts, the fist-shaking and the unabashed horse trading that accompanies any bill on its perilous way through house and senate.

King — once described by a literary critic as an author who "writes like an angel would if it grew up in West Texas and drank" — repairs the oversight of the civics class.

Under his tutelage, mere mortal voters see how it's really done on Olympus and the result is both an education and an entertainment.

"The Best Little Statehouse in Texas" is a solid piece of broadcast journalism, but like "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," it's good theater too. When the latter finally runs its string out on Broadway, King just might have a successor in the wings.
