Saints preserve us

The Texas map is dotted with communities, counties and rivers bearing the names of saints — like San Antonio, Santa Anna, St. Hedwig, San Pedro.

An exhibit running through October 18 at the University of Texas Institute of Texas Cultures in San Antonio explores the stories behind how these places received their names. "Saints Preserve Us" is a collection of 36 retablos displayed in a setting reminiscent of stucco-walled homes and churches, where they are commonly found.

Retablos are images of saints, usually painted on metal and used as the centerpiece of home altars among Hispanic families of the Southwest. The retablos in "Saints Preserve Us" depict saints who were particular favorites of pioneer settlers. Often, a geographical feature such as a river, mountain or settlement was named after a saint whose feast day was being observed when Spanish explorers discovered the site.
