When fullback Paul Winston of the Texas A&M University soccer team scored two late goals Sunday against the University of Texas, he and his teammates still had hopes of winning.

The Aggies, who scored first in Sunday's match with the Longhorns, fell behind 3-1, making prospects dim for the hosting Texas A&M team. However, when the Longhorns were penalized twice late in the game, Winston took advantage of his two penalty shots to kick the tying goals past University of Texas goalie Amir Miremadi.

The two goals were the last of the match, as the two teams played out the remaining minutes to end in a 3-3 tie. The tie was the Aggies' first Southwest Conference Soccer League match of the season, giving the team a 1-3-1 record for the season.

About four minutes into the first half, Aggie forward Neto Walsh scored to give Texas A&M an early lead. Twenty minutes later, the Longhorns tied the score, sending a hard shot past Aggie goalie

Xavier Holquien.

Texas scored about five minutes later to take a 2-1 lead at halftime, and the Aggies' early lead had quickly disappeared.

Neither team scored again until the 15-minute mark of the second half, when University of Texas forward Ralph Wood gave the Longhorns a 3-1 lead on shot high over Holquien's head. Although the Aggie goalie leaped, the ball had been cleanly kicked into the top of the net out of his reach.

Winston felt the Aggies had built enough momentum to score a winning goal, but that there wasn't enough time.

"Just a couple more minutes and we would have had them — it was real close. I think after we scored that first goal three or four minutes into the game, we just let up a little."

Opponents of the Texas A&M University women's softball team learned early about the Aggies' pitching strength. Now they're quickly finding out about what had been cited as one of Texas A&M's weaknesses: hitting.

After the results of this weekend's Stephen F. Austin Invitational tournament, Aggie adversaries should consider the team's hitting to be as solid as its pitching.

The Aggies won all six of their games in the tourney, picking up 15, 15, 13 and 11 hits in four of their games on the way to the championship. The team combined a perfect game, two no-hitters and a one-hitter with its strongest hitting of the season to shut out five of six opponents.

After the first three weeks of the season, the Aggies now have a 20-2 record.

In the Aggies' first game, Lori Stoll threw a perfect game, striking out 12 in leading her team to a 7-0 victory over former Texas A&M coach Bill Galloway and the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs. Her teammates totaled 13 hits, with Josie Carter and Patti Holthaus each going 3-for-4.

Nicholls State University found Shan McDonald too tough to hit in the Aggies' next victory. McDonald pitched a no-hitter while Texas A&M scored 10 runs before the game was called in the fifth inning because of the 10-run limit. The Aggies had 15 hits, with Lisa Martinez picking up three and Eya Resendez two.

Stoll pitched a one-hitter and struck out eight against Sam Houston State University in the next game, as the Aggies won 2-0. Freshman catcher Gay McNutt hit her first home run as an Aggie, bringing home the two runs that carried her team to victory.

Against Pan American University, McDonald pitched another no-hitter in the Aggies' 15-0 victory. Texas A&M had 15 hits in the game, which was called again after the fifth inning. Martinez had three hits to lead the Aggie offense.

Martinez then had her chance to outdo the pitching performances of Stoll and McDonald, and she came through with a 6-0 shut-out of host team Stephen F. Austin. The freshman pitcher posted 13 strikeouts, while the Aggies had 11 hits in the easy win. Iva Jackson and Mary Lou Youngblood had three hits apiece for Texas A&M.

In the tournament championship, the Aggies faced the University of Texas at Arlington, who earlier in the season gave the Aggies one of their two losses. Stoll pitched a two-hitter as the Aggies won 4-1, with Jackson, Carter and Youngblood combining for six of Texas A&M's hits.

Stoll is now 5-1, McDonald has an 8-1 record and Martinez' record is 7-0. The Aggies travel to Killen Friday to play in the Sam Houston Invitational tournament.
