Foster, Hinckley talked on phone

United Press International
NEW YORK — Actress Jodie Foster — who first said she had never spoken to the man accused of shooting President Reagan — actually had two telephone conversations with John W. Hinckley Jr., law enforcement officials say.

Transcripts of the calls show Hinckley's pathetic and love-stricken efforts to talk with Foster and her irritation with his letters and phone calls.

"Listen, don't, don't hang up. Please," Hinckley, 26, implored Foster during one of the two telephone conversations with her that he tape-recorded.

Officials believe Hinckley tried to kill Reagan in an attempt to impress Foster, 18, a sophomore at Yale University. There are no references to the president or violent acts in either of the calls, however.

At an April 1 news conference at Yale, Foster said she had never met, spoken to or in any way associated with one John W. Hinckley.

But in a brief telephone interview Tuesday, Foster confirmed that she had spoken with Hinckley. She declined to discuss the matter in any detail.

"It's not anything I can talk about," she said, adding that federal officials had requested her not to discuss the case.

The tapes containing the conversations with Foster were found in Hinckley's Washington hotel room shortly after the president and three others were shot in Washington March 30.

In the months before the shooting, Hinckley visited New Haven, Conn., where Yale is located, on at least two occasions in an attempt to meet with the actress. He also sent her a number of letters.

During one midnight phone call to Miss Foster's dormitory room, Hinckley repeatedly said he just wanted to talk with the actress, the new transcripts show.

Foster: Seriously, this isn't fair. Do me a favor and don't call back. All right?

Hinckley: How about just tomorrow?

Foster: Oh God! Oh seriously, this is really starting to bother me. Do you mind if I hang up?

Hinckley: Jodie, please.

After telling Hinckley she would be unable to talk with him again because she was leaving Yale for the weekend, Hinckley remarked: "Oh, it's almost over, Jodie."
