"No Parka You Bika Here Ever Again!" is the message residents of McInnis Hall are trying to convey to bike riders. The banner alerts cyclists that, as of Wednesday, all bicycles are to be parked in the nearby bike racks. However, as this Wednesday afternoon photo shows, some people never learn.

Barbie's fingers nailed as germ breeding ground

United Press International
HAWTHORNE, Calif. — Mattel Toys recalled fingernail polish distributed through its Barbie Doll cosmetic line because it does not have enough anti-bacterial agents to prevent the breeding of germs.

"A routine check of the product revealed the bacterial control agent in the polish was below our standards," Mattel spokesman Spencer Boise said Tuesday. "We thought the best thing to do was stop any shipments and issue the recall."

The recall advised consumers to stop using the product and return it to the store or call the company with questions.

The order also halted shipments of the polish to stores and warehouses and directed store managers to remove the product from their shelves.

Boise said the company had not received any reports of consumer problems with contaminated polish, but said officials decided to issue the recall as a precautionary measure.

Widow tries to clear husband of Lindbergh murder

United Press International
 FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The widow of the man electrocuted for murdering the infant son of aviator Charles Lindbergh is seeking access to 90,000 state police documents she says will clear her dead husband's name.

Anne Hauptmann, 83, was expected to file suit Wednesday in Hunterdon County Court.

The civil suit, which names Gov. Brendan T. Byrne and state Attorney General James Zazzali, alleges state officials "have continuously withheld and concealed facts and the truth (about the investigation) from Anna Hauptmann and the public."

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was convicted of the March 1932 kidnap-murder of 20-month-old Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. and was electrocuted for the crime on April 3, 1936, in Trenton.

The suit claims Hauptmann "was wrongfully and unjustly charged" and said his widow "lives for the day that he is posthumously exonerated and vindicated for this terrible wrong and injustice."
