Q: What's at least 8 inches by 10 inches, black and white or color and could win its owner a Vivitar flash?

Camera Committee's Fall Photo Contest.
Last day to enter the contest is next Friday. All amateur photographers are urged to submit entries, said Tim Widdison, committee public relations officer. Prints that have won a previous MSC Camera Committee contest are ineligible, he said.

Black and white prints must have been shot, processed and printed by the person entering them, but professional processing and printing is allowed for color entries. Eleven-by-14 and 16-by-20 mounts for the prints are encouraged, and the smallest size acceptable is 11-by-13.

There's no limit on the number of prints anyone can enter, and the photos won't be judged by categories. Instead, the prints will be judged on their overall artistic and technical quality. Judging begins Oct. 25 in Rudder Forum, and the public is welcome to attend.

Prints can be turned in at a first floor table in the Memorial Student Center, A&M Consolidated High School, Bryan High School and Blinn College's main office. A $2 entry fee per print is required at that time.

Prizes for the contest include a developing kit, a Vivitar 283 flash and an 11-by-14 enlargement. Some winners will be awarded ribbons and their photos will be displayed in the MSC Gallery.

Membership in the MSC Camera Committee is open to all Texas A&M students and a $10 membership fee entitles them to use the committee's facilities.

The committee also sponsors classes and workshops in photography.

Next Friday and Saturday, the committee will present John Everett, a photographer for The Houston Chronicle, and Kenneth Kobre, head of the photojournalism program at University of Houston and New York Times free-lancer, in a lecture and workshop on photojournalism techniques.

White House staff photographer Billie Shaddix will be here Nov. 20 and 21 to run another workshop sponsored by the committee.

Thief locates key to crime prevention

United Press International
DALLAS — A city councilman, known as a crusader for crime prevention, left the keys in his Cadillac — only to have a thief steal it.
To make matters worse, not only did the thief who stole Rolan Tucker's 1979 Cadillac Tuesday get a full tank of gas, but he also got Tucker's research material on crime prevention.
Among the research is information on a proposed ordinance making it illegal to leave one's keys in the ignition of an unattended car.
At a council meeting Wednesday, Tucker took a ribbing from other council members.
"It's the very thing I have been talking about," Tucker said. "Police statistics show that half the car thefts involve automobiles where the keys were left there."
He said his wife laughed for minutes when he told her what had happened.
