Parent company rings Southwestern's Bell

United Press International
AUSTIN — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is attempting to make its customers pay $24,800 for portraits of American Telephone and Telegraph Co. executives, $114,300 for these executives' memberships in New York City clubs, $30,000 for dinners they attend and the $75,500 bill for defending the expenses.

Texas customers are also being asked to foot the bill — at $127,200 — for 5,000 personal visits of AT&T shareholders with Southwestern Bell managers. Bell claims the expense is necessary because it allows the shareholders to "personally communicate" with local Bell managers about their investment.

Last year, Southwestern Bell was charged $38.4 million by AT&T for "services."

This year, AT&T wants $54.2 million from Southwestern Bell as part of the $469.8 million rate increase Bell has requested.

Bell pays its parent company for technical advice and data processing services, but consumer advocates and competitors who have examined AT&T documents consider many of the services both unnecessary and overpriced.

AT&T wants Bell to help pay the $167,100 cost of operating the Madison Avenue Theater in Bell's new building in New York City and $104,500 it contributes to the Gifford Chapter of Telephone Pioneers, the New York City association of retired and longtime Bell employees.

Bell customers also are being asked to pay the bill for AT&T's defense of the various controversial expenses. The company is seeking $75,500 to prepare testimony and provide witnesses to "demonstrate to state regulatory bodies that the services are of benefit to ratepayers."

Southwestern Bell seeks $729,100, so it can benefit from AT&T's controversial pricing strategy of advocating "measured service" — under which local calls would be charged like long distance calls — by time of day, duration and distance.

Don R. Butler, attorney for the cities battling Bell's attempt to get $468 million in higher rates, said: "AT&T is like the federal government. It tells Southwestern Bell what it needs and makes Southwestern Bell pay the bill. Everything is predicated on AT&T's corporate goals, not on what their customers want or what is necessary to provide good service."

Bell paid AT&T for keeping track of federal legislation — $171,200 so the massive company could monitor telecommunications legislation in 50 states. Bell also contributed to the more than $45.4 million AT&T spent battling antitrust suits by the U.S. Justice Department and competitors. U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene of Washington, D.C., has already concluded from government evidence that "the Bell System has violated the antitrust laws in a number of ways over a lengthy period of time."

Sam F. Rhodes, a consultant from Dallas who examined the rate issues, said Texas payments to AT&T have increased by 30 percent a year — at a time when revenue was going up at 15 percent annually.

Agencies investigate charges of unlicensed prison doctor

United Press International
HOUSTON — A Texas prison employee was authorized to dispense drugs at the Huntsville prison unit even though he did not have a license to practice medicine in the state, a Houston newspaper reported Sunday.

Assistant Huntsville Unit Hospital Administrator John R. Burney authorized V.M. Ancheta to write prescriptions on July 29, 1980, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story.

The newspaper said the U.S.

Drug Enforcement Administration and the Texas Department of Public Safety are checking the charges that V.M. Ancheta and other unlicensed Texas Department of Corrections personnel write drug prescriptions.

The State Board of Medical Examiners in Austin has no record of an application for a license to Ancheta.

Prison spokesman Rick Hartley told the Chronicle TDC officials were aware Ancheta, who reportedly attended medical school in the Philippines, was unlicensed in Texas.

Hartley said Ancheta practiced at Huntsville Unit Hospital only under the supervision of licensed physicians.

But the Chronicle reported copies of prison prescription forms bear only the signature of Ancheta without that of a TDC doctor or other employee.

Hartley could not identify which doctor supervises Ancheta and refused further comment.
