Rice hosts A&M field hockey club in initial match

The Texas A&M University field hockey club will play a match against the Rice Owls at 10 Saturday morning at the Rice soccer field in Houston.

This warm-up match will be the first competition for the Aggies this year. Texas A&M will travel to Denver, Colo., for a tournament scheduled to begin Nov. 6 at the University of Denver.

Field hockey is played like ice hockey with warm weather differences, and is played on a soccer field with a round ball. But, it does retain the things that made hockey famous. The women do use sticks to hit the ball with and game can get rough.

For the past two years, the team has gone to Mexico for national competition. Team captain Phoebe Davol said the team played olympic teams from Mexico, Argentina and Central American countries.

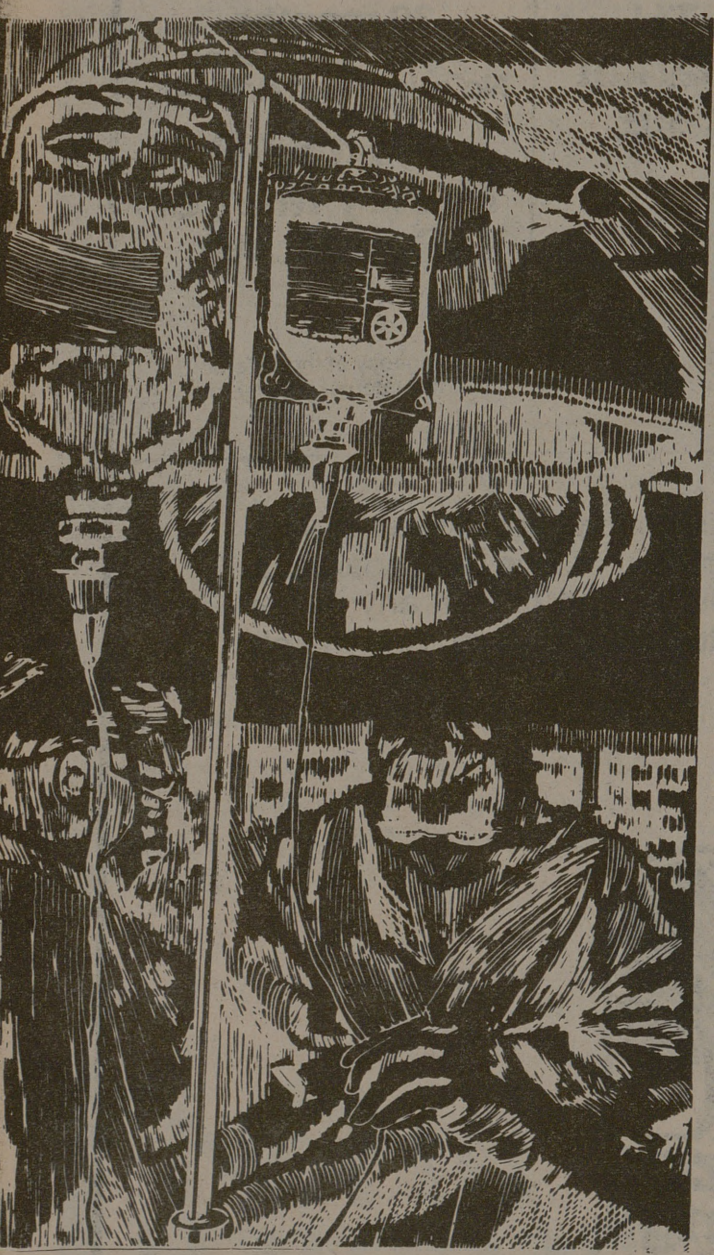

The team is planning on returning for another shot at the state level.

She said field hockey is a popular sport in the East, California and Colorado. There are a few teams in Texas but not many.

The team practices on Hester field, at the intersection of University's West Main entrance and Wellborn Road.

For more information on women's field hockey, contact the extramural office.
