Boot line tradition may be discontinued

Because of increasing problems with boot line, the senior privilege of welcoming the football team back on the field after halftime may have to be discontinued. "If we don't have total cooperation between the seniors and the organizers of the boot line, it's possible we may lose another huge tradition," Head Yell Leader Mike Thatcher said. Thatcher said that problems with the line in the past have included not being able to control the crowd and keeping the seniors off the field. An increased number of people participating in boot line has made communication between organizers and participants difficult, he said. "It is important that the seniors pay attention to the people in charge so that they can form the line properly and quickly," Thatcher said. Organizers will include Officers of the Day, Yell Leaders and Student Government representatives. Seniors should be prepared to present their ID or Class of '82 Aggie Ring to be allowed on the track. Senior dates will not be allowed unless they are also seniors. When coming down to the track, no one will be allowed to jump over the wall; entrance should be made from the southeast corner of the stadium. The seniors will form four lines making two routes that football players can follow to return to the field. The Corps officers and Student Government representatives will direct seniors onto the track as they form the lines. "Things that need to be stressed to the seniors are total cooperation with the people in charge, not going onto the field of play and a quick exit from the track so that play can resume," Thatcher said. Seniors going onto the field can result in a 15-yard penalty against the Aggies on the kickoff. "Boot line is a tradition that is important to seniors as well as the team," Thatcher said. "It fires the team up for the second half and with cooperation the boot line can remain an effective tradition."

Brand new in lineup, Tab cola added to Kyle Field's roster

Football fans who believe Tab a beautiful treat will be in luck at Saturday's Texas A&M-Southern Methodist University football game. The sugar-free soft drink has been added to Kyle Field concessions stands, along with the Coke, Sprite and Dr. Pepper usually sold. The Student Senate declined last week to consider a bill recommending the sale of sugar-free drinks at University functions. However, Laura Furr, Spence/Briggs/Underwood senator and author of the bill, said concessioners agreed recently to add Tab to their list of drinks in time for this week's game, after first saying the sugar-free drinks would not prove profitable. The Senate, therefore, is unsure whether the sugar-free drinks will continue to be sold. Although no bill showing senate and student support was available, Associate Athletic Director Wally Groff said several students had requested the drinks.
