Texas, Houston top SWC game

United Press International
The people who run the Cotton Bowl are a long way from being able to issue an invitation to one of the Southwest Conference schools, but they might uncover a pretty good clue in the Astrodome Saturday night.

Five teams still have a shot at the trip to Dallas Jan. 1 and two of them will hack away at each other in the major event on the SWC weekend dance card.

Texas, which sports a 5-1 conference record going into the Saturday night struggle, will face up to the Houston Cougars, who are 3-2 along with three other teams.

And a glance at the remainder of the schedule tells why the winner of this one will probably be considered the frontrunner for Cotton Bowl spot.

After facing Texas, Houston's only remaining games are against Texas Tech and Rice. The Cougars, even if they sweep all three, would still need help in a loss by Texas A&M but the Aggies have a tough schedule left to play.

Texas, meanwhile, has games left with TCU, Baylor and Texas A&M. A sweep of those would put the Longhorns in Dallas New Year's Day.

But on top of the importance of the game, the contest should be a good one simply because of the potentially dominant defenses that will be on display.

For a change there will be one SWC game this weekend that will not have a bearing on the championship race.

TCU goes to Texas Tech with last place on the line. But the other two games — Arkansas hosting Baylor in Little Rock and Rice traveling to SMU — will have something riding on them.

Both the Razorbacks and Bears own 3-2 league records and the loser will be out of the title picture. The loser also will be close to being removed from bowl consideration altogether.

Tailback Johnny Hector prepares to jump for the Aggies lone touchdown in last Saturday's 27-7 loss against the SMU Mustangs. Hector and the Aggies, now 5-3 for the year, have Saturday off before they host the Arkansas Razorbacks next week. The Hogs entertain Baylor (5-3) this weekend in Little Rock.

Cross country team looks for good things in meet

By RICK STOLLE

Battalion Staff

After coming in second place last week, the Texas A&M women's cross country team is looking for good things this week in the AIAW Regional Meet in Georgetown.

The Ags will be going against some of the same teams they have competed against for the past three weeks. Texas, Lamar, A&M, the University of Texas at San Antonio and UT at El Paso are some of the teams that are scheduled to compete Saturday.

The three top teams from eight regions and the top 10 individuals will qualify for Nationals to be held in Idaho in two weeks. "We are finally healthy for a meet," said Aggie coach Bill Fenske. "It seems like it has been a long time since we have been completely healthy."

Since the start of the season, Aggies have been having problems with injuries and illness taking its toll of the athletes. "Almost all the athletes on our team have been out with some type of injury over the course of the season."

Despite the past obstacles, is confident the Aggies will be able to capture one of the top spots and continue on to nationals.

"I believe we have a very good shot at a second," he said. "We're the track inside out and are ready for the race, no matter what the weather."

Last week, the meet was rained out and mud following the days of rain and bad weather in central Texas.

Running for the Aggies will be Marilee Matheny, Barbara Collinsworth, Suzanne Sheffield, Adelaide Bratten and Lisa McClinton.
