Westinghouse plan approved

By RANDY CLEMENTS
Battalion Staff
The College Station Planning and Zoning Commission approved the Westinghouse parking lot plan and tabled for the second time a 102-acre rezoning request.
Dallas Morris, landscape architect for the Westinghouse plant, said a major concern of residents of the Raintree subdivision, which is adjacent to the plant, was the lighting for the facility. The lighting for the parking lot will meet city requirements, he said.
Additionally, plant security lights and the loading dock will not be visible from the subdivision, he said.

"We've taken pains in development to minimize harsh lighting and have payed about 20 percent more on landscaping to buffer the plant site from the neighborhood," said Frederick P. Hunsicker, project manager of the electrical assembly plant.
Neighbors in the Raintree subdivision also were concerned about the influence the plant would have on the neighborhood because of frequent truck deliveries and the type of product produced by the plant.
Eight to 10 truck deliveries will be made a week — with a limited amount of raw materials being delivered, Hunsicker said.

The Westinghouse plant, expected to be manufacturing by January 1983, will manufacture printed wiring assembly, Hunsicker said.
For the second time in three weeks, the Commission tabled a rezoning request for 102 acres on the north side of Southwest Parkway — despite, hearing favorable comments from the developer, neighbors and the city staff.
Commissioner Anne Hazen said the proposed medium-density apartment zone, allowing a maximum of 24 units per acre, was too high and should be rezoned to the lower townhouse zone, which allows a maximum of 14 units per acre.

Ron Cruse, a developer of property across Southwest Parkway from the 102 acres being considered, said tabling the request doesn't do justice to the property owners or neighboring residents. Cruse had met with the developer, area residents, the city staff and the Commission subcommittee since the Commission's last meeting Oct. 15.
The commission will have a workshop meeting Wednesday to come up with an acceptable plan and will reconsider the request for the third time at the Nov. 19 meeting.

Ex-McAllen cops charged in attacks

United Press International
BROWNSVILLE — A federal grand jury that saw videotapes showing McAllen policemen punching and kicking prisoners indicted five former officers on charges of violating the prisoners' civil rights.
The charges, filed Wednesday, stemmed from an FBI investigation that began last April, and from four months of hearings by the grand jury. The investigation is continuing.
Videotapes played for jurors showed officers beating, kicking and slapping prisoners brought to the McAllen police department's booking desk.
The tapes were discovered when one man who was arrested overheard an officer tell another to shut off the videotape machine. The man later told the U.S. Justice Department about the videotapes, and a federal judge ordered the tapes to be preserved. All of the indicted officers have resigned from the department at different times during the past two years, a police spokesman in McAllen said.

One indictment charged former Sgt. Roberto R. Ramos with ordering other officers to beat a prisoner on Sept. 24, 1977.
A separate indictment claimed ex-officers Tom W. Carter, Jaime E. Conteras and Alfredo Saldana "did willfully strike, kick, beat and assault" a prisoner on Oct. 23, 1978.
Former Officer Isidro Ybanez Jr. was charged in a third indictment with assaulting a prisoner in McAllen on May 20, 1979.
If convicted on the charges of deprivation of rights, the men could each face maximum sentences of one year in prison and $1,000 fines.

Woman seeks ownership of ring following break-up

United Press International
DALLAS — One of love's many splendored things will likely end up in a courtroom battle, both parties seeking possession.

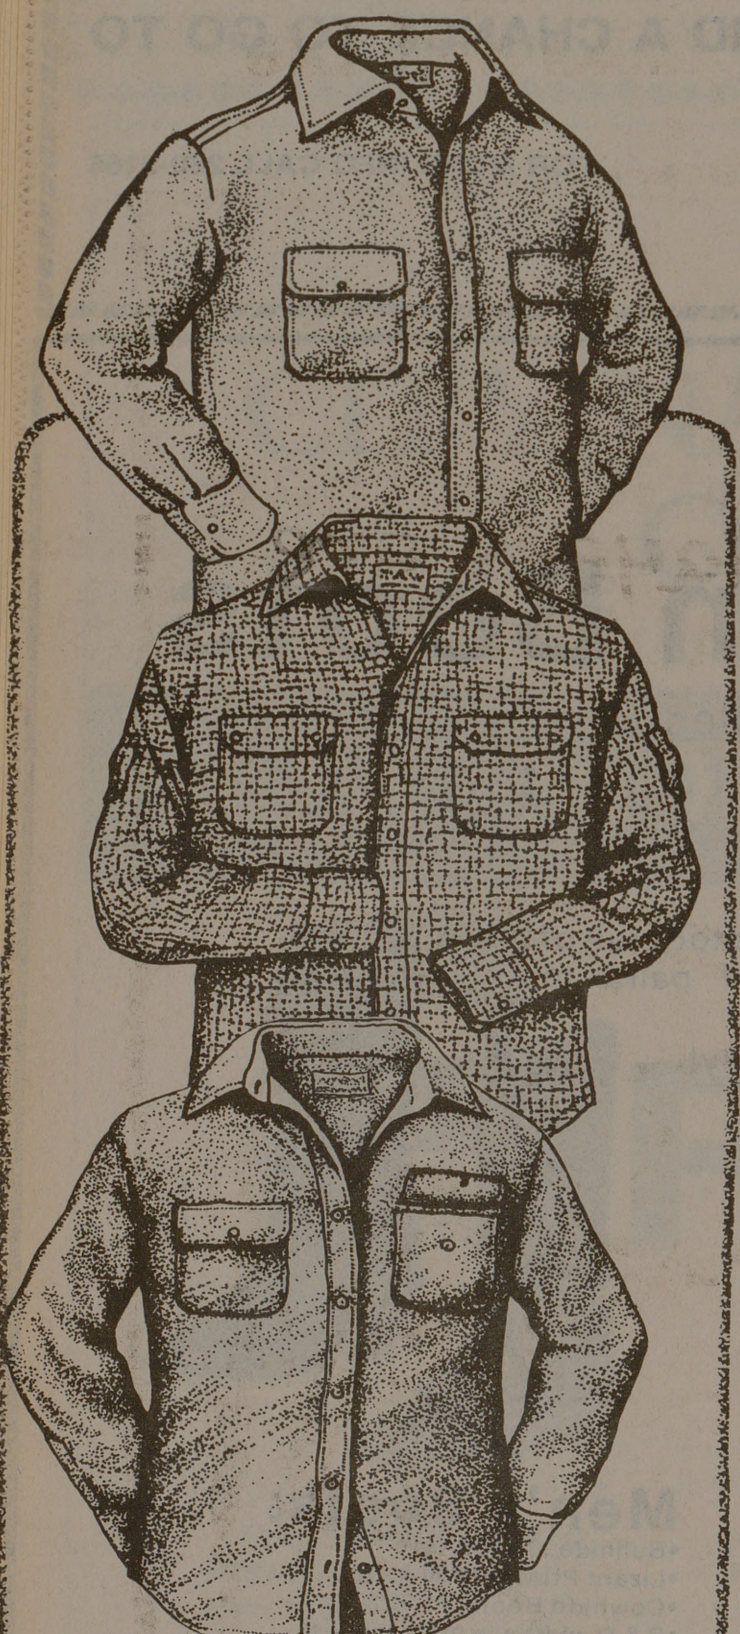

The object of the issue is a 2.48 carat diamond ring Jim Hays, 51, gave his ex-fiancee, Cynthia Bender, 28, in January.

Hays gave the ring, which said had been appraised at $27,900, to Bender after a three-month courtship, but the couple broke up during the summer. Bender's attorney, Bob McFarland, said Bender announced she was going to keep the ring.

CO-OP OPPORTUNITY IN CANCER RESEARCH

On Tuesday, November 10, and Wednesday, November 11, representatives from the Stehlin Cancer Research Foundation (associated with St. Joseph's Hospital in Houston) will interview students interested in beginning Co-op with them in the Spring semester. They want to interview students majoring in any of the Sciences (including pre-med), BICH, BIMS, ANSC, or Food Science Technology; and plan to hire four students to begin work in January in their formal alternating semester Cooperative Education Program in Houston.
A minimum grade point average of 2.7 and U.S. Citizenship are required. You must call the Director of Cooperative Education's Office at 845-7725 or come by Room 107, Harrington Tower to sign up for an interview with Stehlin Foundation, an orientation to co-op, and to complete your application PRIOR TO YOUR INTERVIEW.

"Instead of angrily hounding the ring off the chest of her fiancee, like it's always done, she told him to shove it and told she was going to keep it," McFarland said.
Hays filed suit this week asking to get the ring back.
Bender is scheduled to appear before State District Judge Brown Walker next week but then, Walker has issued an restraining order against Bender from donating or selling the ring.
McFarland said the case is one of the few in Texas court history which a man has filed suit to get engagement ring back.
"American courts have generally followed the tradition that from one person is unconditional (meaning it doesn't have to be returned) except in the case of marriage," McFarland said. "If marriage doesn't occur, then the gift should be returned to the donor."
