Student legislation involves research

Senate committees give bills analysis

By NANCY FLOECK

Battalion Staff Government legislation is presented, debated, and passed every other day at Senate meetings. While some bills are introduced and acted upon, others wait until research and reports are ready for Senate action.

The number of bills in waiting is growing. The committee's research and new legislation is introduced at each meeting.

Five bills involving University have spent more than two weeks in Student Government committees awaiting the verdict of the Senate. The committee must study the problems and possible solutions addressed, and present the bills to the Senate with a recommendation of approval or rejection.

If approved, the legislation requested is forwarded to the appropriate University officials and administrators.

Summer School Registration: Calls for the establishment of summer school pre-registration procedure, with separate registration for undergraduate and graduate students.

Kathy Bartholomew, vice president of the Academic Affairs Committee, said the committee is waiting results from the recent campus canvass, a student survey before making a recommendation on the legislation. The survey asks students if they would use summer school pre-registration.

Reaction from University administrators has been mainly negative toward the recommendation, Bartholomew said. The committee has studied the policies of other Southwest Conference universities on the matter, and discovered that some schools do not offer summer school pre-registration.

Q-Drop Review Bill: Recommends a review by the Academic Affairs Committee of the Q-drop policy as related to student needs. They will submit a report to the Student Senate before the end of this semester.

Bartholomew said unless new legislation is proposed, no further action will be taken on the bill after the report. She also said there are some problems with the current Q-drop policy and a new bill recommending possible solutions should be proposed in the future.

MSC Check Cashing Bill: Recommends the addition of another teller or extended hours at the MSC Main Desk in order to avoid long check-cashing lines.

Chris Langford, vice president for the Student Services Committee, said this bill will be held until the committee can determine if the desk can obtain the additional funds needed to accommodate the cash flow if extended hours or additional tellers are added.

Publicity for other campus check-cashing facilities, such as Rudder Tower and the Coke Building, is another goal of this bill, which also discourages the practice of last-minute check-cashing, Langford said.

Zachry Parking Lot Bill: Recommends the reassignment of 60 parking spaces in parking annex 51, near the Zachry Engineering Center, from staff to student parking. The bill states the need for proportioned distribution between staff and student spaces to maximize University parking.

Langford said Student Services Committee members have seen several empty spaces in the lot during office hours. The committee expects to meet with University planning officials to discuss why the extra spaces have been designated for staff parking.

Library Force Task Bill: Addresses the reshelving problem in the Sterling C. Evans Library that occurs the few weeks before final examinations when student workers are given time off to study. Students who need the unshelved material for finals and projects are unable to locate them. The bill recommends the establishment of a senate task force to study possible solutions to this situation.

"We found out the library has recently hired someone to be in charge of reshelving books," Langford said. He said the bill will not be acted on soon since the library is working on the problem. If the situation remains unaltered, action will be taken on the bill, Langford said. Otherwise, the bill will be killed in committee.

In addition to the bills that have spent several weeks in committee, eleven new bills were introduced and assigned to committees at Wednesday night's student senate meeting. Research on the new bills officially begins this week, although preliminary studies have already been completed.

Parade, yell practice to lead Corps trip

Midnight yell practice and a Corps of Cadets parade will be held in Fort Worth this weekend for the Texas A&M-Texas Christian University football game.

However, as of late Wednesday night, Head Yell Leader Mike Thatcher did not know where the Fort Worth yell practice would be held. An announcement is expected sometime today.

The Corps parade is part of what is known as an Aggie Corps Trip, an event that occurs twice each year during the football season.

More than 2,000 cadets, including the Aggie Band and Parson's Mounted Cavalry, will begin the parade at 10 a.m. on Weatherford Street move east to Houston Street; right on Houston to Eighth Street; left on Eighth to Throckmorton Street; right on Throckmorton to Third Street; left on Third to Burnett Street and return to Weatherford.

Brig. Gen. Harley A. Hughes, commander of the 19th Air Division at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, will receive the salutes from 41 units as they pass the reviewing stand at Main and Ninth streets.

Aggie Corps trips date back to 1878 when special trains transported the entire uniformed Texas A&M student body. Early outings were made to the San Jacinto Battlefield for the staging of mock battles. Later excursions centered around football contests, the shift occurring about the turn of the century.

Concession permit topic for RHA meeting tonight

The Residence Hall Association will meet at 8:30 tonight in 301 Rudder Tower to discuss concession permit policies.

Any organization that wants to sell literature or sell anything on campus, except to its own members, is required to have a concession permit. This policy includes all MSC committees, however.

Concessions permits can be obtained in the student activities office in 221 MSC. Also at the meeting, surveys concerning the new RHA structure will be passed out for hall delegates and presidents to complete.

The RHA structure changed last spring when five new director positions were created under the vice president's position. The positions include directors of facilities and operations, external affairs, programs, projects and public relations.
