CS barbecue pavilion to be completed soon

By ERICA KRENNERICH
Battalion Reporter
A 3,000-square-foot open-air barbecue pavilion in College Station Central Park should be complete by Christmas, the park planner says.

The pavilion will have kitchen facilities — stoves, sinks, counters, serving windows — and a 10-by-4 barbecue pit with several doors, Park Planner Carlos Mendez said. The shelter area will have two large restrooms with lounges.

The facility, designed by Don Hill, was planned to capture the rustic farm-like atmosphere of the park by using lap and gap cedar with a tin roof, Mendez said. Construction on the facility began in October, he said, and since the building's design is simple, the work can be finished in two months.

"We saw there was a definite need for something like this," Mendez said. "We have some shelter areas now, but they don't have this large of a facility and can't accommodate large groups."

The $88,000 pavilion, which will accommodate 200 people, is funded by taxpayers' money budgeted to the College Station Parks and Recreation Department for use in specific city zones.

A worker continues construction on an open-air barbecue pavilion in College Station. Upon its completion in December, the facility will be able to accommodate at least 200 people.

Visiting prof will discuss U.S. policy

United States policy in Central America will be discussed by Dr. Margarita Melville, an anthropology professor at the University of Houston at 7:15 p.m. Friday.

The program, which is being sponsored by the International Students Association, will be in 301 Rudder Tower and admission is free. A reception will precede the speech.

The speech will concern such Latin American situations as human rights violations and disruption in the various governments.

Texas A&M students will represent their various countries, including Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, United States, Venezuela and Belize, in response to Melville's speech.

Melville has a master's degree in Latin American studies and a doctorate in anthropology from the American University in Washington. She has done volunteer work in Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua and anthropological field work in Chile.
