Judge may halt billion-dollar oil takeover bid

United Press International
CLEVELAND — A federal judge is sifting through thousands of pages of technical testimony and figure-filled documents to determine whether to block Mobil Corp.'s $5.1 billion bid to acquire Marathon Oil Co.

Marathon, as part of an antitrust suit against Mobil, wants a preliminary injunction against the merger, saying it's a threat to competition and will endanger the public interest.

Attorneys for the two firms presented closing arguments Monday after a five-day hearing.

Marathon attorney Patrick McCartan said that protection of the public against possible monopoly depends on prompt and effective enforcement of antitrust laws.

Mobil, the nation's second largest oil company, rejects the antitrust arguments by Marathon, the 17th largest oil company, as groundless, saying they are based largely on speculation.

"There is really no probability that this acquisition is going to lessen competition in any real... relevant market," Mobil attorney Sanford Litvack told U.S. District Court Judge John Manos.

Both sides in the case have asked for a speedy decision. A ruling was expected this week.

Mobil said Monday that it attracted 23 million Marathon shares — just over 38 percent of Marathon stock — as of midnight Saturday under the takeover offer it announced Oct. 30.

Marathon stockholders who sent in their shares under Mobil's $85-a-share offer have until Dec. 4 to withdraw their stock.

And unless Mobil raises its offer, analysts say there is a good chance many will pull out, since U.S. Steel last week made a higher offer — $125-a-share for 51 percent of Marathon stock as part of a $6.65 billion merger proposal.

Ohio Attorney General William Brown, who is suing in state and federal courts to block the Mobil takeover attempt, plans to review the U.S. Steel offer for its possible violation of antitrust laws.
