

'Pilot. The pens you have to hold onto with two hands.'

—Rodney Dangerfield
"Get your claws off my Pilot pen. See... I don't get no respect!"

"People have a hunger for my Pilot Fineliner because they're always fishing for a fine point pen that writes through carbons. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen. So I don't get no respect! I don't make out any better with my Pilot Razor Point. It writes whip-cream smooth with an extra fine line, its metal collar helps keep the point from going squish—so people love it. For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen—and show some respect for my property."

Angry artist gets x-cellent mark at sale

United Press International
VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Some ironic recognition has come to artist Ed Roebuck, who defaced his paintings with spray paint to protest their auction.

Roebuck sprayed 60 of his paintings last week with black x's, shortly after learning that liens had been placed against them to collect three months' back rent.

Since then, the artist said Monday, he's been swamped with calls from buyers and galleries in Washington, D.C., and New York that want to display his work.

Roebuck said: "People didn't notice much when I made them, but they turned their heads when I destroyed them. It is our sickness."

Before his protest, Roebuck had sold only one painting at the Norfolk gallery where they were on display, but since then seven of the x-covered originals have been sold.

"It seems like I screamed out to a lot of people," Roebuck said.

Roebuck said he has refused an offer from an entrepreneur who sought permission to reprint one of the marred paintings on a T-shirt, and does not plan to raise the price of the works, which he valued at $30,000.

Firms sing the 1982 blues

United Press International
The 1982 model year is likely to be a dark one for auto buyers, autoworkers and automakers. And much of the plight can be traced to high interest rates that have thrown a wrench into the industry.

Chase Econometrics, a private economic forecasting firm, has predicted that 9.2 million cars will be sold during the model year, down from last month's prediction of 9.3 million. Just a few years ago, sales topped 11.3 million.

A small amount of improvement is expected during the first quarter of 1982; however, this will not be enough to offset the overall bad year, the firm said.

Concerned by such dismal forecasts, leaders of the United Auto Workers union have gathered in Detroit for a three-day meeting of the union's executive board. The conference started Tuesday.

Conference topics are likely to include ways to keep the the auto industry afloat.

Two automakers — American Motors and International Harvester — have requested concessions in advance of the next contract and other automakers have asked for the same treatment.

But union leaders have stood firm against pressure from employers for takebacks similar to those granted Chrysler Corp. in the midst of its recent problems.

Chase's Automotive Economist Wesley Stuchlak said high interest rates are a major reason for the auto industry blues.

"I guess that you have to expect the auto industry to recover when both the economy recovers and interest rates come down," he said.

In Washington, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters that President Reagan's economic plan is on target. The plan's success can be seen in the declining inflation rate, he said.

Responding to questions about the unemployment rate of more than 8 percent, Speakes predicted an economic upsurge in the second half of 1982.

But, in direct contrast to the rosy predictions, Lockheed Corp. of Burbank, Calif., announced Monday it will phase out production of its L-1011 Tristar airliner, move which will put 9,000 Lockheed employees out of work.

Board Chairman Roy Anderson said only five of the $50 million planes were ordered in the first months of 1981 and orders for three others were canceled.
