Quick-acting students disarm bomb at TCU

FORT WORTH — A hooded man placed a small pipe bomb on the steps of a Texas Christian University dormitory early Thursday, but the device's crude fuse sputtered out and the bomb did not explode, police

The bomb, which bomb squad investigators said had the explosive force of a hand grenade, was dismantled by a group of students who arrived on the scene shortly after the suspect was scared away about 1 a.m.

A student returning from an outing with a female companion noticed the man, wearing a hooded sweat suit, trying to light the device in front of Tomlinson Hall. The suspect ran from the scene after the student yelled at him, bomb investigator H.B. Owens said.

The device was later dismantled by a group of students who also arrived at the scene, Owens

The device was encased inside a hollow metal container and used a crude paper fuse which frizzled out, investigators said. Owens said the bomb, though small, could have sent glass and shrapnel through the front doors of the dorm and sprayed a wide area with metal fragments.

Officials were distressed that the students had touched the de-

"If they (the students) would have left it lying there, it's possible we could have gotten some fingerprints off of it," Owens said. "They took a personal risk when they handled the thing in

GM chief bargainer Alfred Warren said he didn't think the industry could wait until July for relief from the high labor which costs automakers claim have put them at a $1,500 to $1,800 disadvantage per car with Japanese

"We regret this (impasse) very much," Warren said, "not only for the employees of General Motors, but for our customers and the nation as a whole."

The problems at GM centered on determining union concessions on economic issues like cost-of-living allowances, health care and other benefits. Other problems include GM's practice of delegating work to foreign and non-union domestic layoff-weary members.

Another thorn in the side of the union was a remark made by GM Chairman Roger Smith during an optimistic time in the talks. Tuesday he threatened further plant closings if workers didn't grant extensive conces-

Despite the breakdown in GM talks, UAW Vice President Donald Ephlin said the union "would like the opportunity to come back and do some bargaining" at Ford following Satur-day's meeting of the UAW's Ford and GM bargaining councils in Washington.

Peter Pestillo, Ford vice president for labor relations, said he sources — a major sore point for was heartened by Ephlin's desire the union. The union also to continue talks and said this

The UAW and GM had gotten off to a quick start in the early talks Jan. 11. The next day they unveiled a revolutionary framework for bargaining described as the beginning of a new spirit of cooperation between the company and labor. Fraser said the union was disappointed the novel proposal which called for contract concessions to be passed on to consumers in the form of car price cuts didn't work.

Ford was caught off guard by the plan and refused to embrace it. Talks with Ford have been on hold this week as bargainers waited for progress at GM.

THE BLUE RIDGE. The Blue Ridge sound is rich and resonant with exceptional sensitivity. This is due to the solid cedar wood top and a special hand formed bracing pattern. Greater volume and projection is attained with the rare burled mahogany body which was chosen for its sound quality as well as its beautiful grain; edgewood with Ivoroid, herringbone inlay around the sound hole. Ebony fingerboard has pearl inlay snowf-lake markers.

RAMBLING 12. This model is similar to the DY78 in dimensions and construction detail. However, the body is made of mahogany with ivoroid and wood binding around the body and soundhole. The sound is rich and full with excellent volume. Alvarez special formula bronze wound, so sil-k'rosteel strings are used on both models. Bone Nut and Saddle.
