U.S. delegation to go to Hanoi looking for MIAs

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Administration officials say a U.S. delegation will go to Hanoi soon for talks about the 2,500 American servicemen still missing in action from the Vietnam War.
"I hope Hanoi is ready to talk turkey," Gladys Brooks, New York State coordinator for the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, said late Thursday, told about the new development.
Brooks' son Nicholas was shot down over Laos in 1971, reported missing in action.
"Our hopes have been burst in the past so many times — I don't think they are not burst this time," said Brooks, whose group represents 1,500 families of MIAs.
The officials said the delegation will go to Hanoi, probably in February, to discuss prisoners of war and those missing in action. ABC News reported the delegation will include a high-ranking Defense Department official who anticipates most serious discussions of the MIA issue since 1973.
A Pentagon spokesman initially refused comment on the delegation and administration officials who did comment declined to identify the members of the delegation.
Four U.S. veterans of the Vietnam War ended a six-day hunger strike that country Dec. 24, saying they had opened a dialogue with the Vietnamese government. The chief topics of discussion were MIAs and long-term effects of Agent Orange, the herbicide used by American forces during the war.
The veterans visited Hanoi at the unexpected invitation of the Vietnamese government. Although the United States has normal diplomatic relations with Vietnam, the State Department agreed to the mission.
After the trip, Robert O. Muller, executive director of the Vietnam Veterans of America and a Marine Corps veteran, said, "The distinct sense the Vietnamese want to have good relations with the United States."
The group was asked by the Vietnamese to serve as the link between Washington and Hanoi on the issue of MIAs.
Remains of three Americans missing in action in the Vietnam War were returned to the United States from Vietnam in 1981. That brought to 75 the number of bodies turned over to U.S. military by the Hanoi government since the United States pulled out in 1974.
Barbara White of Vicksburg, Miss., the Mississippi coordinator of the National League of Families, said the extent of her group would depend on the makeup of the U.S. delegation that will go to Hanoi.
"We've seen many people go over there since 1973, but haven't been taken that seriously," she said. "I'm encouraged. I've been encouraged before and nothing's come of it."
White's brother, Air Force Capt. Larry James, was shot down over Cambodia eight years ago.
The joint-service Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Hanoi, a humanitarian organization established by the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1973, maintains active case files of 2,505 U.S. military and 41 U.S. civilians missing or killed in action in Vietnam.

Redistricting plan still being studied

United Press International
AUSTIN — With election deadlines near, the boundaries of legislative districts in Texas remain in limbo awaiting rulings by a federal court and the U.S. Justice Department.
A three-judge panel in Dallas Saturday finished hearing a challenge of new House and Senate districts drawn by the Legislative Redistricting Board and scheduled brief closing arguments for Wednesday.
However, no ruling is expected until the Justice Department completes its review of the plans under the Voting Rights Act. Deliberations by both bodies could keep the configuration of the districts uncertain until well past the Feb. 1 deadline for filing for public office.
The suit contends the Legislative Redistricting Board knowingly discriminated against Republican voters and racial minorities in violation of the Constitution.
The board, composed of House Speaker Bill Clayton, Comptroller Bob Bullock, Attorney General Mark White, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, drew the districts in late October after the Legislature's plans were alternately vetoed and declared unconstitutional.
All members of the board were Democrats.
Both Hobby and White testified for the state and defended contentions that information compiled by Bullock's staff used to draw districts that discriminate against Republicans.
However, Frank Newport, a pollster with the firm advises Gov. Bill Clements, the information could have been used for partisan rymandering.
Funding for the elaborate case came largely from the Republican Party of Texas, which was involved as plaintiffs in the case. Ed Emmet, Kingwood and Bob Davis, Irving, The Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund has also contested the plans.
Norman Newton, director of the Justice Department, estimated that the case cost $60,000 to try, just getting the case to trial.
Time has become a key element because of approaching filing deadlines. The Justice Department, it hopes either to approve or disapprove the plans this week, but the deadline still could be delayed to allow persons for office and voters to register in new precincts.
Should the Justice Department delay its ruling, the court might be forced to propose districts to be used in elections.

Children's parents file suit over blast

United Press International
SPENCER, Okla. — Two lawsuits seeking a total of $6 million were filed in an Oklahoma City court Friday by parents of two children injured in an explosion at an elementary school.
Mike Gassaway said Friday the lawsuits were being filed so early after the Tuesday blast because "we are being denied access to physical evidence." He said lawyers wanted an injunction to keep officials from altering the evidence.
"The police won't let us in" to the blast site, he said, and won't let lawyers see the pieces of the water heater that may be to blame.
Gassaway said the suits were filed on behalf of the parents of Christine Murphy, who was in fair condition Friday, and Ricky Reagan, who was released from surgery.
Meanwhile, officials instructed the 80-gallon water heater and analyzed three to determine what allowed the heater to explode at the call in killing five children and a teacher.
School officials in other Oklahoma communities examined their own water heaters and viewed disaster plans because of Tuesday's explosion at Elementary School, which has six people in the Oklahoma suburb.
"We still are not to blame," said State Fire Marshal Jack Sanders, who has urged an explosion to push for a stringent state inspection program.
