Court rejects school prayer

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today again refused to back away from its ban on prayer in public schools, affirming a ruling that struck down a Louisiana voluntary prayer law. The justices rejected arguments from Louisiana officials that a child has a constitutional right, under the guarantee of freedom of religion, to join in a voluntary prayer before the start of each school day. Instead, they affirmed a lower court ruling that found the law allowing voluntary prayer at the start of a school day violated the Constitution's First Amendment ban against establishment of religion by a state. The issue of school prayer is one of the items on the so-called "social agenda" before Congress. Louisiana's law provided that up to five minutes at the end of each school day could be for the offering of a voluntary prayer in the classroom. Under the plan adopted by the Jefferson Parish School Board, only children who had been requested in writing by their parents could participate in the prayer. Children who chose not to participate could either sit at their desks or wait outside the classroom. Both the parish plan and law were challenged by a group of parents. Although they survived an initial court test, both the parents and the school's application were struck down on review by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans in 1981. The landmark decisions in 1981 forbidding school prayer

Girl given hope by liver donors

DALLAS — Responses to a nationwide plea for a liver donor have given new hope to the family of an 8-year-old girl suffering from a fatal liver disease. Brown-haired, blue-eyed Cassie McPherson weighs only 35 pounds, but the enormous swelling in her abdomen from cirrhosis of the liver has given her a huge 29 1/2-inch waist. The symptomatic bleeding throughout her body, causing bursting blood vessels and clots form, creates her need for trips to the hospital about ten days for more blood. Without a liver transplant, her mother fears she will bleed to death. A spokeswoman for the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, which aids families with children who have liver disease, Sunday a national story. Cassie has prompted response from people who want to donate a liver to Cassie from as far away as Kansas, Wash.
