Death threats force politicians out of Salvadorian elections

United Press International
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Death threats mailed by guerrillas to scores of Salvadorian political leaders and U.S. diplomats have forced some politicians to drop out of the upcoming elections, top diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

"An all-out effort is being made to sabotage elections," said one high-ranking source who asked to remain anonymous.

"Every important political leader has received written threats. Some candidates have dropped out."

Threats also have been mailed to several officials at the U.S. Embassy, another source close to the mission said. Embassy spokesmen refused to comment on the report.

El Salvador's ruling junta and its U.S. allies hope the March 28 balloting for a constitutional assembly will put the Central American nation on the road to peace. The assembly will set the rules for 1983 presidential elections.

Guerrillas and their political allies are boycotting the elections, which have attracted seven rightist and centrist parties.

Libyan assassination scare aided Khadafy, author says

United Press International
HOUSTON — A specialist on the Middle East says he doubts President Reagan was a target of Col. Moammar Khadafy's hit squad, but added that the Libyan leader reaped political benefits at home from the assassination scare.

"The hit squads do exist," said Dr. Monte Palmer, director of the Middle East Studies Center at Florida State University Monday at a seminar in Houston.

"Think of all the publicity," Palmer said. "Among the Arab youth, it made Khadafy seem like a hero."

Palmer, who has visited Libya 10 times in five years, wrote the book "Political Development and Social Change in Libya." In it, he described Khadafy as a brilliant totalitarian leader who lacks the resources in his country of 2.5 million people to attack Israel or challenge the United States.

Although many Americans picture Khadafy as a "wild man screaming in the breeze," his fiery oratory appeals to young Libyans, Palmer said.

Opponents of Khadafy have been shot at 11 times but, Palmer said: "I don't believe they intended to assassinate President Reagan."

The Reagan administration's decision to remove all Americans from Libya was not a good move, Palmer said.

He said he had never spoken to an American who was treated poorly in Libya.
