graphics simulator. The simulator reads a robot's program and makes a three-dimensional drawing of what the robot will do.

This is used to try out control programs "rather than have it (the robot) go haywire in the lab," Mooring said.

Computer support lab — work for easy communication between various computer systems will be done here. Also, the computers used by the robotics program will be located here.

Robotics applications lab — works on moving and adapting the technology to the work place. For instance, a robot in the sewing industry must be able to pick up a garment, see the seams and sew them together.

Industrial automation lab — will work with the problem of integrating robots with existing systems in industry.

Young currently works with the industrial engineering department's industrial automation lab.

He said the lab sets up typical industrial situations to find problems which may occur. Specific research objectives still are being decided, he said.

Robotics also have a real potential to aid handicapped people. Mooring said there are wheelchairs for quadriplegics that can be controlled with a movement of the head. More research with robots may offer more aids for the disabled, he said.

Robotics also are used in microsurgery, Mooring said. He said a doctor can look in a microscope and tell a machine to make a certain movement. The machine is controlled by the doctor, he said, but it makes precise movements which a human could not make.

Pope tells Nigerians to discourage strikes

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, protected by heavy security on the last full day of his five-day visit to Nigeria, told workers Tuesday they should not be too eager to strike because of the suffering it can cause.

The pope, 61, looking refreshed and rested, celebrated an early morning mass at the Gothic Holy Cross Cathedral in the Nigerian capital.

Security was extra strict following reports that at least four people were arrested in crowds surrounding the pontiff, including two who were carrying guns.

When the pope entered the cathedral he was preceded by his own security men and followed by an armed escort of Nigerian police. But there had been no indication of any attempt to attack the pope, wounded last May in an assassination attempt in St. Peter's Square in Rome.

The mass was for workers and employers, although the congregation of about 4,000 looked prosperous and well dressed in both Western and traditional garb, and came by gold-edged invitation only.

"Workers should not too readily have recourse to strikes, which generally cause much suffering to many," the pope told them. "Strikes remain extraordinary measures for the defense of human rights.

"Work is for man, not man for work. So, work must not be allowed to dehumanize the person who does the work."

The pope's words had particular application to his native Poland, but he did not directly mention the situation there.

Police arrested a single gunman Friday at the national stadium in Lagos and detained two men and a woman with a single gun Sunday at the Kaduna airport where the pope spoke.

Sources say grand ayatollahs ready to step in for Khomeini

United Press International
An Iranian leadership council composed of three "grand ayatollahs" Monday was reported ready to succeed Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini whose health is said to have deteriorated since he canceled public engagements Saturday.

Exiled opposition sources claiming to be in contact with Khomeini's household said Khomeini, 82, was confined to bed in his Jamaran residence in North Tehran.

His entire household was gathered around him, sources said, including grandson Hojjatoleslam Hossein Khomeini, an opposition sympathizer who lived until recently in isolation in Qom, Khomeini's former headquarters 80 miles south of Tehran.

Britain's Post Office operators said telephone lines to Iran were out of order. Iranian exiles stationed in other European cities reported similar difficulty in getting through to Tehran to obtain news.

"Alternative contacts are being established, though it is no longer easy," an exile group's spokesman in Paris said.

Telephone contact between France and Iran has been cut since former President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr and Massoud Rajavi, the Mojahideen Khalq guerrilla leader, flew to Paris July in a hijacked plane and made it the headquarters of their "national council of resistance." Bani-Sadr was ousted president in June.

Tehran radio broadcasts not even mention the formation of the leadership council.

The council was set up Sunday after a four-hour meeting in Qom among the three prominent "grand" ayatollahs still sympathetic to the Islamic Republic and President Hajatoleslam Sayed Ali Khamenei. Its formation followed by the Tehran Radio announcement that Khomeini would have public engagements until March 4.

Today's Almanac

United Press International
Today is Wednesday, Feb. 17, the 48th day of 1982, with 317 to follow. The moon is moving toward its new phase.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

There is no evening star. Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.

American novelist Doris Canfield Fisher was born Feb. 17, 1878.

On this date in history: In 1801, the House of Representatives named Thomas Jefferson as the third president of the United States. Aaron Burr who tied with Jefferson in Electoral College, became president.

In 1817, Baltimore became the first American city to have gas-burning street lights.

In 1972, President Nixon on his historic trip to Peking named George Bush to be director of the CIA.

A thought for the day: American philosopher William James said: "Man lives by habit, deed, but what he lives for is thrills and excitement."
