Miller to try again for LA Open victory

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — Lee Trevino? He led all golfers with a 65 in Wednesday's Pro-Am prelude to today's start of the Los Angeles Open.

Defending champion Johnny Miller? He had a 67 but said he just can't figure out the greens.

Former President Gerald Ford?

"He played so-so, but at least he didn't hit anyone," quipped Miller following the tuneup round to the 56th LA Open.

Wednesday was a day of fun and jokes for Miller. Today at the Riviera Country Club the tension begins, even for a guy who has already won $569,827 this year, including $500,000 in a non-tour event in Bophuthatswana, in south Africa.

Miller shot a course-record 14-under-par 270 to win the event last year but said it's doubtful anyone will beat that mark this year.

"People talk about how great the Crosby is but I consider the LA Open the Cadillac of West Coast tournaments," Miller said. "The greens at Riviera are the most difficult to read in the country. You can putt from one way and you move your ball an inch in one direction or another and it might break the other way."

"I'd like to repeat as champion here, but one reason it's so hard to do is the winner has to be lucky — it's nearly impossible to figure the breaks."

The LA Open has not had a repeat winner since Arnold Palmer did it in 1965-66. But, both of those tournaments were played at Rancho Park Golf Course, where the tournament moves next year. The last to repeat at Riviera was Ben Hogan in 1947-48.

Trevino took advantage of warm, sunny weather to shoot his 6-under-par 65 over the sprawling, 7,029-yard Riviera layout. Trevino had six birdies, including four in a row. But he also felt Miller's tournament record would be safe this year because of rain earlier in the week.

"The course is playing long, very long, because it is wet," Trevino said. "I don't think Miller's record can be touched."

The 72-hole tournament over the par-71 Riviera course had 144 golfers teeing off this morning.

Holmes-Cooney fight delayed until June 11

United Press International
NEW YORK — Sit back and relax if you have been anxiously awaiting the showdown between Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney. The confrontation won't be settled for nearly four months.

The WBC heavyweight title fight scheduled for March 15 between Holmes, the champion, and Cooney, was delivered a knockout punch Wednesday because of an injury to the challenger's left shoulder. The bout was rescheduled for June 11 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas.

Cooney, who originally injured the shoulder five weeks ago while training for an exhibition bout with Joe Bugner that later was canceled, underwent a series of tests Wednesday and was diagnosed by Dr. John Bergfeld, a prominent orthopedist from the Cleveland Clinic, to be suffering from torn muscles in his left shoulder.

Bergfeld said Cooney would begin a series of strengthening exercises, under the supervision of his personal physician, Dr. Jeffrey Minkoff, immediately, and said the challenger might be able to begin sparring within two weeks if he responded well to the treatments.

"He has partially torn muscles adjacent to the rotator cuff," said Bergfeld, who was added to the examination team at the request of Don King, the promoter for Holmes. "There are several muscles in the back part of the shoulder and many of the fibers are torn.

"There's always the chance he could reinjure the shoulder in training again, but if we bring him along slowly the chances are minimum. It's the type of injury that should heal up. I have diagnosed similar injuries and have been successful."

Cooney, naturally, was disappointed with the postponement but said that the pain was so intense the past week he couldn't continue workouts.

"I'm very hurt that the fight is not going to take place in March," said Cooney. "I guess you people all know the kind of things Holmes has been saying about me (being afraid) and it would have been much easier if the fight could have come off as scheduled. I just want everyone to know that it's not the money that's important to me in this fight — it's winning the title."

Don King, Holmes' promoter, said he expected the champion to have a preliminary bout sometime before the fight. Cooney. He mentioned Young and Tex Cobb as opponents for Holmes.

Holmes, the 32-year-old defeated champion from ton, Pa., said Tuesday he resigned himself to the postponement and had no training.

Correction

Wednesday's edition of Battalion erroneously reported that the Texas A&M basketball team defeated the University of Houston Tuesday night in Houston. The Lady Cougars won game 87-76, making the Ladies' record at this point for the season. Texas plays the University of San Antonio Friday at 6 p.m. G. Rollie White Collection. The Battalion regrets error in reporting the Saturday's game.
