Watt to seek protection of wilderness resources

United Press International
WASHINGTON — Interior Secretary James Watt says he will ask Congress to approve legislation that would prohibit drilling or mining in wilderness areas until the end of this century.

Watt said on NBC's "Meet the Press" such a law could be altered in case of a national emergency.

"The wilderness is a special area that has been preserved and the law does provide that you can drill within the wilderness areas," Watt said Sunday. "We have not done so."

"In fact, this week I will ask the Congress of the United States, on behalf of the president, to quickly adopt new legislation that would prohibit the drilling or mining in the wilderness until the end of the century."

The secretary said if there was an "urgent national need" the "few acres that might be needed" should be withdrawn from the ban.

Watt said he will propose a complete study of the wilderness, including an assessment of the minerals and energy potential they contain, so the government can study the areas again in the year 2000 and make a value judgment the findings the studies reveal about the areas' resources.

The Wilderness Society promptly hailed what it called a "complete turnaround" in the Reagan administration and said it comes in response to an overwhelming public demand that clearly favors wilderness areas.

When asked what he would require going into business lands, Watt cited an energy embargo, or a security requirement for minerals such as chrome and uranium, for which the suppliers are the Soviet Union and south African states.

Group to discuss MIAs in Vietnam

United Press International
BANGKOK, Thailand — The most senior member of the Reagan administration ever to visit Vietnam will travel to Hanoi on Tuesday to seek information on 2,400 Americans still missing in action in Indochina.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard C. Armitage will head the five-man U.S. delegation in discussions on the MIA issue.

Vietnam, from which U.S. forces withdrew in 1973, insists it is holding no U.S. servicemen or remains of American soldiers.

Pentagon officials say they have no reason to believe Americans are being held in communist-ruled Indochina, although 160 of the missing are known to have been captured alive by Vietnamese or Laotian forces.

State Department sources said Tuesday's visit is the result of stiff pressure on President Reagan by the League of Families, an organization of relatives of the missing American servicemen.

Discussions between U.S. officials and Vietnamese diplomats at the United Nations initiated the visit.

Washington and Hanoi have no diplomatic ties and their hostility has deepened since the United States tried to impose economic and political sanctions against Hanoi for its 1978 occupation of Cambodia.

Pope plans visits to Spain, Poland

United Press International
CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy — Pope John Paul II, just back from his strenuous tour of West Africa, announced plans to visit Spain in October.

"The beginnings of the church in Spain, as those of Rome, go back to the time of the apostles," said the pope, who returned Friday from his first trip since he was shot in an assassination attempt last May.

The pope told about 5,000 people who gathered Sunday at the papal summer retreat 15 miles south of Rome there have always been special links between the church of Rome and Spain.

During his appearance at the window overlooking the central courtyard of the hilltop retreat, the pope sang and joked in Italian, Spanish, Portuguese and his native Polish.

The pope, suntanned from his 8,000-mile trip, said he would visit Spain for ceremonies marking the 400th anniversary of the death of St. Theresa of Avila, a 16th century mystic and founder of an order of nuns.

John Paul also plans to visit England and Switzerland this year. He hopes to travel to his native Poland in August if politically possible, and has said he will visit even if martial law remains in force.
