

Resident worried about rezoning issue

by Jean Kiser
Battalion Reporter
College Station resident John Honea of 819 Krenek Road told the city council last night that he and several other residents living in that area were worried about rental property being developed there.

Avenue would result in duplexes being built and would conflict with existing single family homes.
Real estate agent Jim Behling requested the council rezone the land from single family R-1 to townhouse and condominium R-3.
Present zoning regulations allow for R-2 developments — duplexes — to be built in R-3 zones.
But an ordinance going before the Planning and Zoning Commission and the council in the next month would end R-2 developments in R-3 zones without a conditional use permit.
Councilman Jim Dozier assured Honea the council would not review a development plan for the tract until the new ordinance was approved.

The council approved the rezoning request with the stipulations that they would vote against, and notify Honea of, any plans for developments other than townhouses.
The council also unanimously approved the rezoning of a 22-acre tract in the Crawford Burnett League, located on the north side of F.M. 2818, from R-1 to apartment low density R-4.
Council members also authorized an application for a grant from the governor's office to increase the salaries of personnel working in the juvenile unit of the police station.

Students to design Silver Taps logo

by Beverly Hamilton
Battalion Reporter
The date for Silver Taps may be easier for students to remember if the Texas A&M Traditions Council is successful.
The council is having students in environmental design classes design a logo that will be easily recognized. The council hopes when students see the logo they will immediately associate it with Silver Taps, David Imes, Silver Taps chairman, said.
Imes said many students fail to see the notices posted around campus the day of Silver Taps and miss the ceremony. The council wants to put up logo signs the day of Silver Taps at campus bus stops so students will be aware of the ceremony that evening.

"We want these signs to reflect the dignity and respect of Silver Taps," Imes said. "We don't want them to look like advertisements."
The council wants students to design the logo since the ceremony is for students, Imes said. The council did not think a professional would be properly aware of the importance of the ceremony. The finished logo will be approved by the council.
The council hopes to have the signs ready for the fall semester, Imes said. The council also wants to use the new logo in a brochure to be released this summer so new students can become familiar with it.
