Kids get hands full with baby

United Press International
LOS ANGELES — A 2-year-old boy who crawled out onto second-floor window ledge at fell off was caught and saved from harm by two quick-thinking youngsters with good hands, police say.

Authorities said the child Michael Nicholes, had crawled out onto the ledge of a Hollywood apartment Saturday afternoon while a baby sitter was looking. As the child turned to crawl back in, he fell backward.

Bobby Yenis, 11, and Scott Garay, 12, who were riding their bicycles around the neighborhood, saw the boy crawl out, jumped off their bikes and ran toward the building police said.

One youth caught the toddler by the legs and the other cradled his head, saving him from death or serious injury.

Sgt. Tom Finn said the baby sitter, who saw the boy on the ledge only as it started to fall backwards, called an ambulance. Paramedics arrived and the two boys told officials what happened.

Court rejects religious school's suit

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court stayed out of a religious freedom dispute Monday over whether the federal government can compel religious schools to provide detailed reports of their employment records.

The justices rejected an appeal by the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary and let stand a ruling that allows the government to collect employment data on most non-teaching staff.

A federal appeals court noted the case required it "to balance the interest of the federal government in enforcing (discrimination laws) against the First Amendment rights of a religious institution of higher learning."

The seminary is owned and operated by the Southern Baptist Convention, an association of Baptist churches. The organization says the seminary's purpose is "to provide theological education, with the Bible as the center of the curriculum for God-called men and women to meet the need for trained leadership in the work of the churches."

The dispute stems from the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which requires every public and private institution of higher education with 15 or more employees to file a report with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission detailing length of employee contracts, salary brackets, and sex and race or national origin of every employee.

The seminary refused to do the reports, charging they are an excessive and unconstitutional government entanglement with religion.

The EEOC filed suit against the seminary, but a federal district judge ruled the institution was not subject to the EEOC's jurisdiction.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans reversed part of that decision, concluding that while the seminary's faculty and teaching-related administrators were exempt from the reporting regulations, it must file a report with the EEOC on its non-academic administrators and non-teaching staff.

The seminary took the case to the Supreme Court.
